

February 1978

$1.50

IND 36587

The adult illustrated fantasy magazine

3 FROM HEALE

What great Christmas gifts for anyone who loves science fiction, fantasy, or fantastic art. You can have one, two, or all three of these books sent directly from the offices of Heavy Metal with a Christmas gift card with your name on it. Merely fill out the coupon below with your name, address, and your check or money order; then add to it your gift list with the names and addresses of the recipients and the exact titles of the books you want sent printed or typed next to their names. We will send the books to them gift wrapped and with a very special Heavy Metal Christmas gift card. A great gift!

PSYCHOROCK: Five stories by Sergio Macedo that have made him a cult figure wherever people have seen the sky rip open and intergalactic bikers battle android overlords for the favors of goddess-groupies to the sound of punk rock. Sixty-four pages in black and white with a bizarre four-color cover. Large size 11" by 9". $3.95. HM4010

ARZACH: All four of the brilliant, full-color adventures of Moebius's pterodactyl-riding hero, acclaimed as works of genius when they appeared in the first issues of Heavy Metal magazine. Plus the amazing, animated story of the man who cracked the Cosmic Egg. Sixty-four pages including thirty-two of perhaps the most astounding color you will ever see on paper. $6.95. HM4011

CANDICE AT SEA: A new comic heroine, in the great tradition of Barbarella, Phoebe Zeitgeist, and Modesty Blaise, Candice, who can't seem to find a thing to wear, is shanghaied, plundered, keelhauled, and otherwise entertained for sixty-four pages of nautical insanity. Sixty-four pages plus cover in perhaps the sexiest black and white ever drawn. Heavy chrome coat cover. 9" by 11". $3.95. HM4012

HM4012
HEAVY METAL BOO 635 Madison Avenue	OKS, Dept. HM 278 , New York, N.Y. 10022
Please send me the l	book bargains circled below.
Please add 60¢ per t	itle for postage and shipping ch	arges.
Enclosed find $ Payable to HEAVY N	Send check of METAL BOOKS.	r money order only.
Sales Tax: For deliving New York State, add	very in N.Y.C., add 8%. For di	elivery elsewhere in
☐ HM4010	☐ HM4011	☐ HM4012
Name
	(Please print)
Address
	StateZip
if you do not wish to	cut the coupon in this ad, but do wish to	order, please print or type all the necessary information and enclose it with a check or money order.

CHAIN

Dear Editors:

I am an avid fan and subscriber to the "H. Metal," and yet I've been close to writing this criticism of some of the story line since my first issue. What has motivated me this morning is your response to a certain D. D'Falahee's letter regarding the sexist material in your magazine. Please reconsider her point, because I think you might find some non-threatening truth to it. If you are unfamiliar with sexism, then perhaps just weigh the demeaning roles and who is in them, and whether or not there is any pattern to story lines. The woman portrayed as the weakling and/ or sex toy period does get a little tiring. . . .

> Lynn Reynolds City, California

Girls, girls, girls — what are we going to do with you? I mean, enough is enough. I'm as much for equal rights as the next woman, but it seems to me, when you start reading feminist politics into comics, well, it really becomes a drag.

Lord knows there are an awful lot of breasts bouncing around the pages of HM, so in contrast we offer "Den" (see p. 9). Often the male artists tend to get a bit sexist, but we run a variety of strips, and frequently the woman does come out "the good guy/gal/person..."

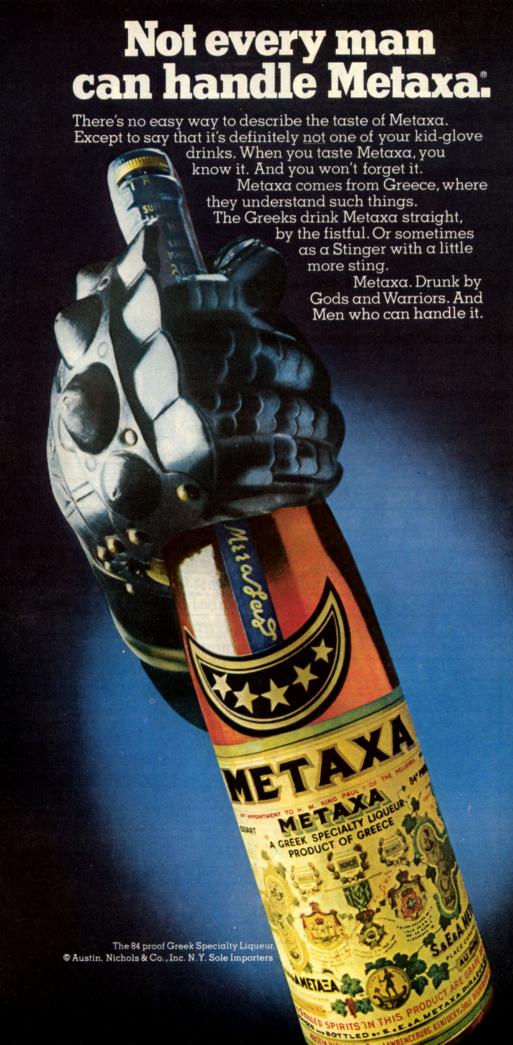

I can offer no ready explanation of why so often "the woman is portrayed as the weakling," and though I'm not condoning it, it's been going on for a hell of a lot longer than Heavy Metal can take the blame for.

So let's calm down — after all, it's a comic book. — Julie Simmons, Associate Editor

Dear Editors:

Having purchased the last three issues of your magazine, I am interested but still not very impressed. Graphics in your publication tend to be very good to excellent. But I fail to see why it is continually necessary to fortify lagging or diarrhetic literary content with the repeated blowing off of heads (more or less graphically illustrated), or blimp-breasted women flaunting their wares or involving themselves in expressions of pubic male fantasy. Surely the writers must be capable of something a little more interesting, cer-

Heavy Metal

Vol. I. No. 11

February 1978

Chain Mail, 1 and 68

... Consequently ..., 4

Marvels of the Universe, by Moebius, 5

The Airtight Garage of Jerry Cornelius, by Moebius, 6 and 66

Den, by Corben, 9

The Winter of the Last Combat, by Mora and Garcia, 17

The Diabolical Planet, by Sire, 26

Urm, by Druillet, 34

World Famous, by Lesueur and Alain, 45

The Burial of Death, by Nino, 48

Venus—Ah, Venus, by Richard Lupoff, 50

Telefield, by Macedo, 57

Age of Ages, by Rubington, 69

Free Fall, by Moebius, 73

Barbarella, by Jean-Claude Forest, 81

1996, by Montellier, 92

Cover: Teachings from an Unholy Book, by Nino

"The Winter of the Last Combat," from the album "Chronique de l'innomee," by Mora and Garcia, copyright © 1977, Dargaud

Editeur, Paris.

"Le Fou," by Druillet, copyright © 1975 by Dargaud Editeur, Paris.

"Den," copyright © 1973 by Richard Corben. "Barbarella," by Jean-Claude Forest, copyright © 1977, Pierre Horay Editeur, France, "Marvels of the Universe," by Moebius, excerpted from L'homme est-il bon?, copyright © 1977, Les Humanoides-Associés, Paris.

"The Airtight Garage of Jerry Cornelius," by Moebius, "The Diabolical Planet," by Sire, "World Famous," by Lesueur and Alain, "Telefield," by Macedo, "Free Fall," by Moebius, and "1996," by Montellier are all from Metal Hurlant, copyright © 1976, 1977. Metal Hurlant is published by L.F. Editions, Les Humanoides-Associés, Paris. Reprinted by permission.

Editors: Sean Kelly, Valerie Marchant

Copy Editor: Susan Devins

Foreign Rights Manager: Barbara Sabatino

Design Director: Peter Kleinman

Associate Editor: Julie Simmons

Production Manager: George Agoglia, Jr.

Assoc. Publisher & Adver. Director: William T. Lippe

Art Director: John Workman

Circulation Director: George S. Agoglia, Sr.

Publishers: Matty Simmons, Leonard Mogel

Advertising Manager: Robin Chalk

BOOKS FROM THE

"UNDERGROUND"

No library of comic art is complete without these representations of the best from the "underground." These books, published in large format on quality book stock, are collections of the outrageously unrestrained comix that are positively for Adult minds only. You must be over 18 to order these bound collections of comic art. Look for them at your local bookstore, or send in the coupon below for fast mail order delivery.

THE ADVECTIONES OF BUILDE LANGE OF BUILDE LANGE OF

SWEET GWENDOLINE. Cartoonist JOHN WILLIE, master of the bizarre, in a special hardbound collection with four rare cartoon adventure serials. Sweet Gwen is always getting in trouble, which includes being regularly tied up and tormented, in this Very Adult version of The Perils of Pauline. 144 pages with 16 in full color. Realistic cartooning for the collector or interested student of bondage. $12.95

YOUNG READER. In 1972 the first underground parody of the True Love Romance comics was published with the title Young Lust. The lampoon of teenage fantasies about romance was so successful that two more issues were produced and total sales approached the half-million mark. This book is the complete reprint in one volume of all three issues. Once you have experienced Young Lust you'll never be able to look another True Love in the eye again without cracking up. 128 pages. $3.95

MINDWARP ANTHOLOGY. A collection of the best work by underground cartoonists DAVE SHERIDAN and SCHRIER taken from Leather Nun, Mothers Oats and other comix. More than any other cartoonists, Sheridan and Schrier are able to make these twodimensional drawings weave, undulate and suck you into a new reality. Mystical fantasy worlds take on a quality that makes it hard to believe you're not THERE. Read this book under the influence of drugs at your own risk! 64 pages. $3.50

CARLOAD O' COMICS. A squareback collection of 160 pages of ROBERT CRUMB'S best work, including a new 14 page Mr. Snoid story, introduction by Harvey Kurtzman and an illustrated bibliography. This terrific book contains all of Crumb's favorite characters in the strips that made them famous, like Mr. Natural, Flakey Foont, Bo Bo Bolinsky, Pete the Plumber, Shuman the Human and more. A superb selection of the work of a cartooning genius whose impact on our culture has been enormous. $6.00

THE TIAJUANA BIBLE REVIV-AL. The fabled Eight-Pager, those erotic and blatantly sexual comic strips that were circulated in the thirties and forties, has been joyfully resurrected in these lewd and rude anthologies. Watch your favorite comic characters and movie stars in the act of hiding the salami. Hilarious classic comics.

Moon Mullins, Mutt & Jeff, Major Hoople and more. $5.00 Vol. II, UNDER THE STARS. 96 pages including Ginger Rogers, Greta Garbo and more. $5.00

Vol. I, HOT NUTS. 96 pages with

KRUPP CATALOG

You've never seen a catalog like this before!

Our latest giant mail order catalog contains listings of over 250 underground comix plus fantasy books and posters, T-shirts, books on drugs, pipes, papers and smoking supplies. Over 1,000 products! Delivered by first class mail for just $1.00, which is refundable with your first order.

Bonus: Order any product on this page and get our giant catalog FREE!

- __ Mindwarp Anthology @ $3.50
 - Sweet Gwendoline @ $12.95
 - __ Carload O'Comics @ $6.00
 - __ Hot Nuts @ $5.00
 - __ Under the Stars @ $5.00
 - ___ Young Lust Reader @ $3.95
 - Krupp Catalog @ $1.00 (Free with order!)

Include 50° with each order for postage.

MasterCharge and Visa accepted. Include all numbers on your card and signature.

- ☐ Check enclosed
- □ Money order enclosed
- ☐ MasterCharge
- □ Visa

credit card number expiration date

Sign here:
I am 18 or older

Name

Address

City

State

Zip

Send to: Krupp Mail Order, Ltd. P.O. Box 9090, Dept. BC-1

Boulder, Co. 80301 Dealer Inquiries Invited

...CONSEQUENTLY...

Not so long, long ago, & right here in this galaxy, there wasn't much. No Mighty Marvel, no Underground Comics, no fun: fun was dead or sleeping under a blanket of Hayes Office movie code, & McCarthy thinking code, & Dr. Wertham comics code . . . & then there was Barbarella! Right there in the pages of the terribly controversial, terribly avant-garde Evergreen Review, a sex-space-fantasy COMIC! Fun was alive and well and living in France! In 1962!

And then there was Zap, &

Spidey, & Pop Art, & a movie about Superman, & Heavy Metal . . .

But it all began with Barbarella, the comic, & was sustained by Barbarella, the movie, & goes on forever (we hope) with the allnew adventures of Barbarella which we begin here, written and drawn by her original creator, Jean-Claude Forest, to whom all praise.

Front & back cover & inside double spread this time by Alex Nino, whom we are assured is "leading figure on the new Philippines illustration scene." Previously famed for you shld pardon the expression psychedelic posters of sword & sorcery class, Nino is in process of illustrating Sturgeon's classic More Than Human stories which we, in time, will publish here.

HM dream-queen Alice Playten aka Alice White sez: "The moral of Close Encounters of the Third Kind is, if everybody on earth were to hum 'Duelling Banjos' at the same time, the Pillsbury doughboy would come down from the sky aboard the Houston Astrodome." Nice talk.

HM COMMUNICATIONS, INC., is a subsidiary of Twenty First Century Communications, Inc.

Chairman Matty Simmons

President Leonard Mogel

Sr. Vice-President, Circulation George S. Agoglia
Vice-President, Finance Charles Schneider
Vice-President, Subscriptions and Product Sales Howard Jurofsky
Vice-President, Advertising Sales William T. Lippe

HEAVY METAL MAGAZINE: "Heavy Metal" is a trademark of HM Communications, Inc., Copyright © 1977 HM Communications, Inc., 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. All rights reserved. Nothing may be reprinted in whole or in part without written permission from the publisher. Any similarity to real people and places in fiction and semi-fiction is purely coincidental.

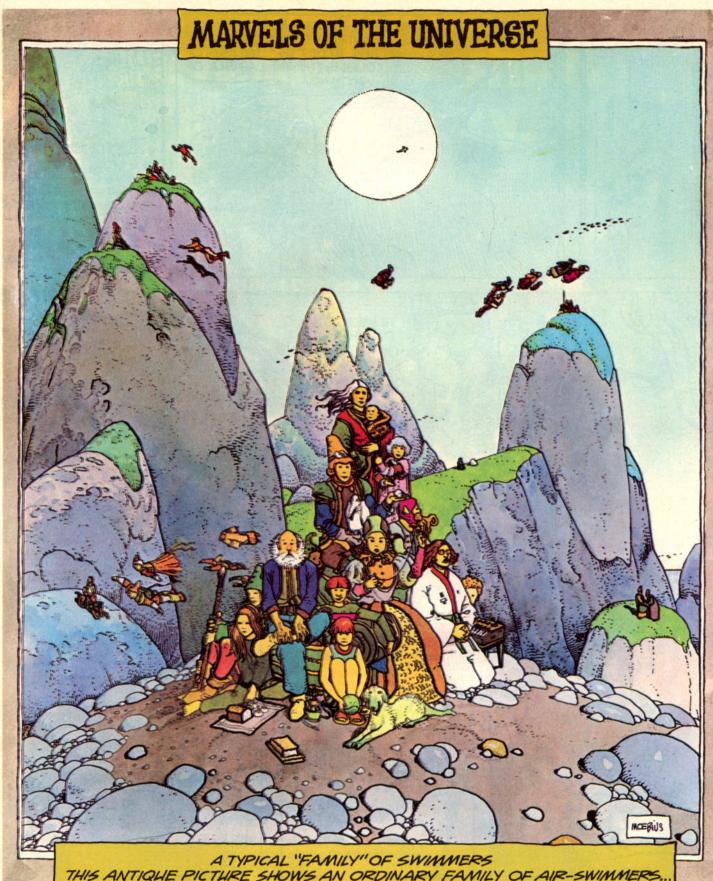

SUBSCRIPTIONS: Published monthly by HM Communications, Inc., 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022, $18.00 paid annual subscription, $26.00 paid two-year subscription, and $33.00 paid three-year subscription in territorial U.S. Additional $2.50 for Canada, Mexico, and foreign. Second class postage paid at

New York, N.Y. and at additional mailing offices.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Subscriber please send change of address to Circulation Manager, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. Allow six weeks for change. POSTMASTER: Please mail form 3579 notices to Circulation Manager, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

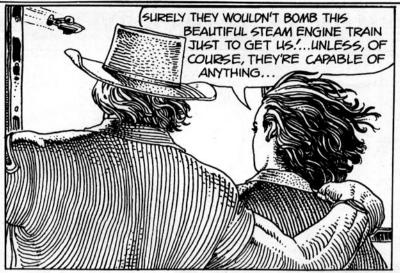

ADVERTISING OFFICES: New York: Robin Chalk, Advertising Manager, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 688-4070. Chicago: William H. Sanke, Midwest Advertising Director, 360 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, III. 60601 (312) 346-7145. West Coast: Lowell Fox and Associates, 16033 Ventura Boulevard, Encino, Ca. 91436 (213) 990-2950. Southern Offices: Brown & Company, Northside Tower, Suite 407, 6065 Roswell Road, N.E., Atlanta, Ga. 30328 (404) 252-9820.

EDITORIAL INFORMATION: Contact Submissions Editor, Heavy Metal Magazine, 635 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022, or call (212) 688-4070. Return postage must accompany all manuscripts, drawings, and photographs submitted if they are to be returned. Publisher assumes no responsibility for unsolicited material.

A TYPICAL "FAMILY" OF SWIMMERS
THIS ANTIQUE PICTURE SHOWS AN ORDINARY FAMILY OF AIR-SWIMMERS...
NOTICE ON THE BOTTOM, THE TOP, AND FROM LEFT TO RIGHT THE FLIER, THE RIDER, THE SPEEDER, THE TWO FRIFONS, THE MAJEN AND THE TOOPONDOO, SO CONTROVERSIAL IN OUR DAY...
IN THE BACKGROUND, OTHER FAMILIES GRACEFULLY EXERCISE
AGAINST THE BROKEN SKYLINE OF THE VERLUSIAN MOUNTAINS.

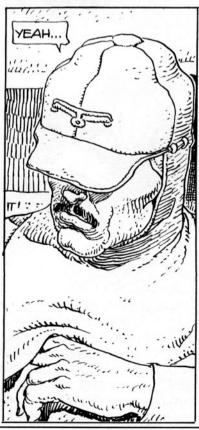

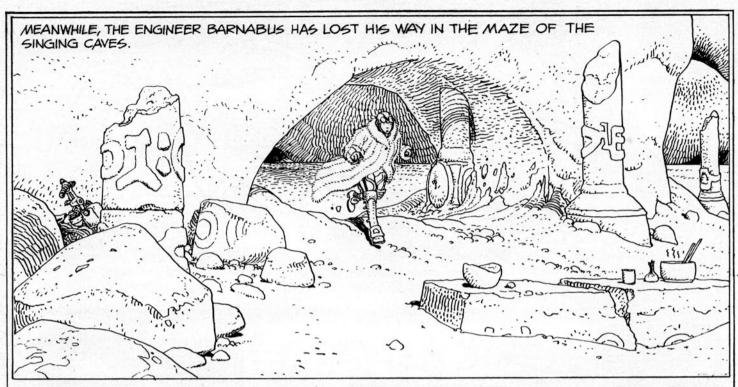

OUR STORY TO DATE: THE ATTRACTIVE STEAM ENGINE TRAIN WHICH IS CARRYING SAM, THE MAJOR'S SPY, HAS JUST COME LINDER ATTACK FROM A MYSTERIOUS AIRPLANE.

Already a runaway best seller in Europe and an underground sensation in America. VIEW9 is the collected record jacket paintings (GENTLE GIANT, OSIBISA, YES), fantasy illustrations, posters, sketches, psychedelic architectural designs, dreams, and visions of England's incredibly talented young artist, ROGER DEAN. 160 oversized pages, in brilliant color.

BITCH! FOUL SLUT! You've failed to even arouse me! You and Den shall die alone!

I should have known better. All mortals fail me. They're so weak and puny.

I will be lord of the Universe and only then will I know satisfaction. Guards, take her and follow me.

Get her! Get her or you will all die.

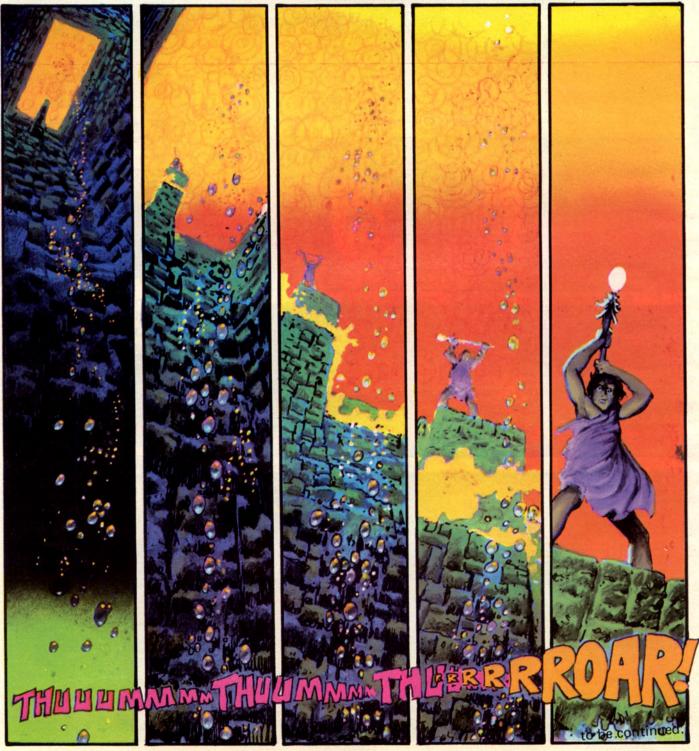

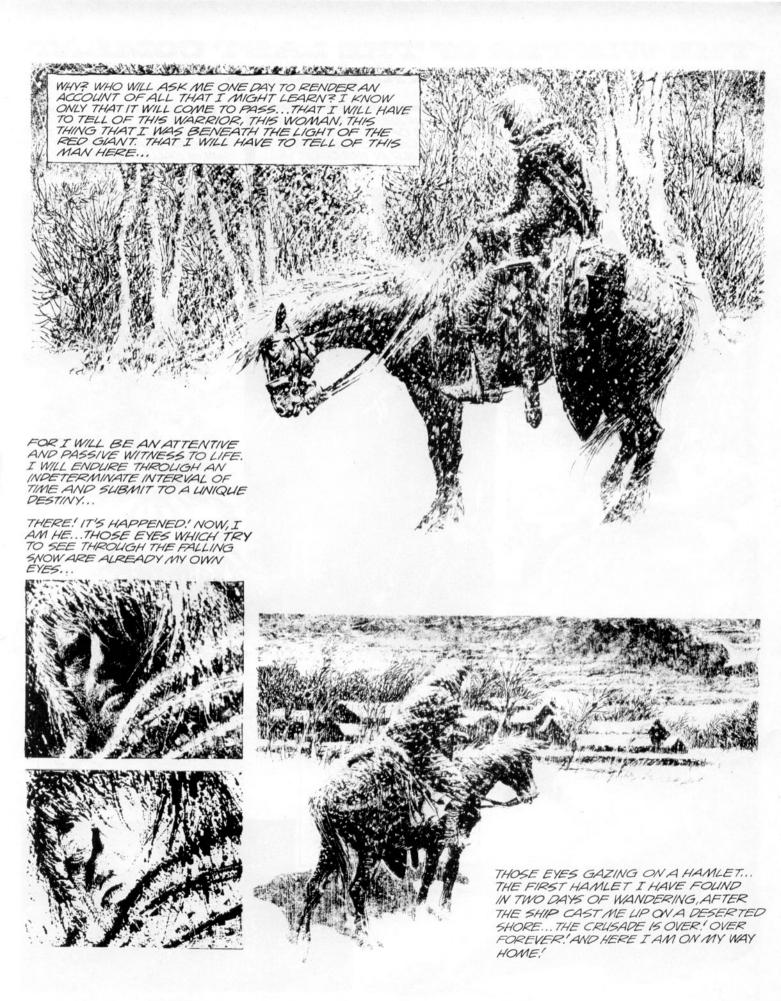

THE WINTER OF THE LAST COMBAT BY MORA AND GARCIA

WHEN I WAS A CHILD, MY FATHER, WHO WAS LORD OF THE MANOR, WOULD TAKE ME THERE OFTEN WITH HIS FRIENDS...AND IT WAS MY RIGHT ALREADY TO RECEIVE THE HOMAGE OF THE PEASANTS...AT THAT TIME I WAS NOT YET ABLE TO READ THE EYES OF MEN...AND I TOOK THEIR FEAR FOR RESPECT.

I TOLD MYSELF PROUPLY THAT ONE DAY I WOULD BE LIKE THE AWESOME WARRIORS WHO ACCOMPANIED ME... THAT I WOULD BE AS GAY AND AS STRONG AS THEY.

I WAS ABOUT TO SMELL THE SCENT OF FRESHLY BAKED BREAD... THE SMELL OF WOOD BURNING IN FAMILY HEARTHS...I WAS ABOUT TO HEAR THE HAMMER OF THE SMITH HITTING THE ANVIL, THE CRIES OF MERCHANTS SELLING THEIR WARES IN THE OLD SQUARE. PEACE! PEACE! THE SCENTS AND THE SOUNDS OF PEACE, AT LAST!

THAT I MIGHT FORGET, THAT I MIGHT FORGET OTHER SMELLS AND SOUNDS...THAT I MIGHT
FORGET THE STENCH OF SMOKE
AND OF DEATH WHICH DRIFTED
OVER JERUSALEM ON THE DAY
WE CONQUERED IT...

THAT I MIGHT FORGET
THE CRIES OF THE DEFENDERS, WHOM WE PUT TO THE SWORD ON THAT DAY WHEN OUR HORSES WADED THROUGH BLOOD...

THAT I MIGHT FORGET WHAT I SAW LATER, WHEN IT WAS ALL OVER, IN THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY SEPULCHER: ALL THOSE BLOODY HANDS LIFTED TOWARDS A CHRIST WHOM THEY PRAYED MIGHT BLESS ALL THAT CRIME AND FOLLY! ALL THOSE BLOODY HANDS WERE ALL WORDS!

AND I DID CONQUER THE HOLY LAND! BUT SO MUCH OF WHAT I SAW OF OURSELVES AND OF THEM FILLED ME WITH DISGUST FOR MEN FOREVER...I DIED THERE, YOU KNOW, IN A WAY...AND MY FAITH DIED ALSO...

...FAITH IN A GOD WHO WOULD ALLOW SUCH THINGS! NOW THAT I HAVE FOUND THIS HAMLET, I WILL WILLINGLY FORGET ALL THAT...BUT...WHAT'S HAPPENING HERE?

BARRED DOORS...BARRED WINDOWS... AND THOSE INSCRIPTIONS...

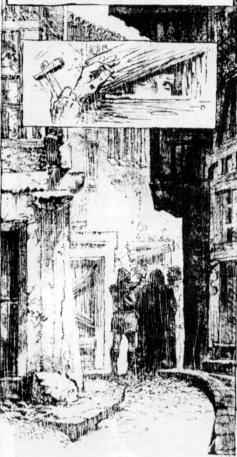

THE BLACK DEATH! SO THIS IS IT!
YES, I CAN HEAR IT LAUGHING
BEHIND ME... YOU THOUGHT YOU
SAW IT ALL... BUT THERE WAS STILL SOMETHING MISSING: AND
HERE I AM TO WELCOME YOU!"

IS IT THE HAMMER OR THE ANVIL WHICH I HEAR? NO! THEY ARE NAILING SHUT THE DOORS AND THE WINDOWS...BUT... WHAT'S THAT?

WATCH OUT,
BEHIND YOU!
THAT HOUSE IS GOING TO BE BURNED! AND THE FLAMES WILL DESTROY THE WITCH WITHIN—
SHE'S THE ONLY
MEMBER OF THE
WHOLE FAMILY
WHOM THE
BLACK DEATH
SPARED!

WHAT ARE YOU DOING, PEASANTS? LET THAT GIRL OUT!

FREE HER
IMMEDIATELY!
DON'T YOU
RECOGNIZE
ME? I AM
YOUR LORP!

HOW PARE YOU THREATEN A MAN OF THE CLOTH?

FOR ME, THERE

15 NO

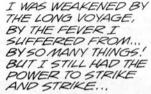

LONGER

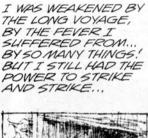

ANY

YES, SOME RUMORS OF THIS HAD REACHED EVEN THE HOLY LAND...THE FEUDAL LORDS HAD CEASED THEIR DOMESTIC BATTLES IN ORDER TO TAKE PART IN A GREAT SCHEME: TO LIBERATE JERUSALEM...AND TO SHARE IN THE BOOTY THEY IMAGINED TO BE FABULOUS! AND IN THEIR ABSENCE, THE OPPRESSED SERFS, PRIVEN BY TOO MUCH INJUSTICE, HAD BROKEN INTO REVOLT AGAIN.

SHE FLOATS THROUGH THE AIR ON WINDS OF THE STORM...SHE WALKS ON WATER...SHE HAS BEEN SEEN IN THE COMPANY OF THE DEVIL UNDER THE MAGIC OAK...

SHE TREMBLES WITH FEAR...!M TREMBLING MYSELF, BECAUSE OF THE FEVER, SHE PRESSES CLOSE TO ME! THE DEVIL! WITCHCRAFT! THERE IS NOTHING FOR ANY OF US EXCEPT THIS FRAGILE LIFE, AND THE FEAR OF DEATH...

SATAN! WITCHCRAFT! THERE IS ONLY ONE MAN, STRUGGLING AGAINST OTHERS, AGAINST THE WORLD...MAN ENDLESSLY ASKING HIMSELF WHAT IS THE MEANING OF IT ALL...MAN, FEARING THAT THERE IS NONE!

I IMAGINE I'VE LEFT ENEMIES BEHIND ME. BUT I'M USED TO THAT...

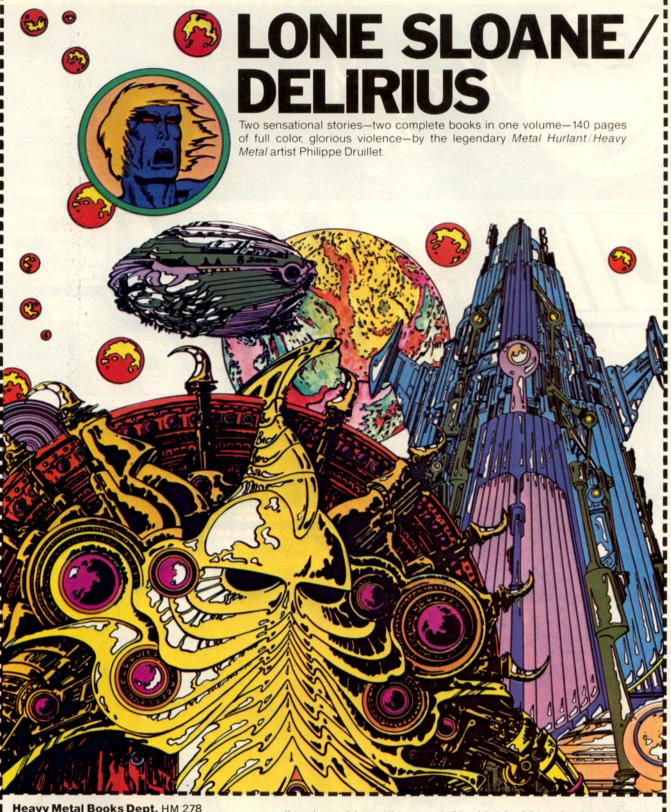

FLEANOR! ELEANOR! I'M COMING BACK TO YOU! I STILL HAVE A LONG WAY TO GO, A FOREST TO PASS THROUGH...BUT THEN I WILL SEE OUR CASTLE! THE NIGHT IS FALLING AND THIS POOR CHILD IS EXHAUSTED!

THIS HUT IN THE CLEARING! I CAME HERE AS A CHILD, AND HUGO THE WOODCUTTER TOLD ME ABOUT THE FOREST, AND ABOUT EVERYONE WHO LIVED AND PASSED THROUGH IT! HUGO MUST BE DEAD BY NOW, BUT THE HUT IS STILL THERE!

TO BE CONTINUED ...

Heavy Metal Books Dept. HM 278 635 Madison Avenue New York, N.Y. 10022

If you do not wish to cut the coupon in this ad, but do wish to order, please print or type all the necessary information and enclose it with a check or money order.

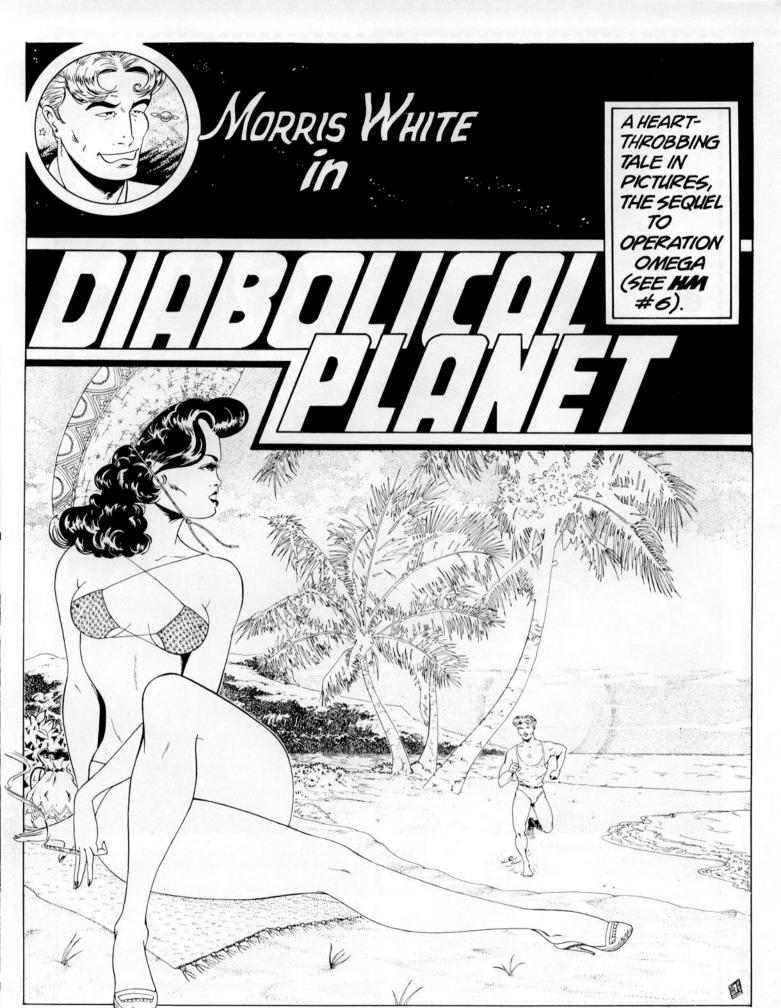

Please send me a copy of LONE SLOANE / DELIRIUS at $9.95 plus 75¢ for shipping and handling. My check is enclosed.

Name ______(please print)

Address_____

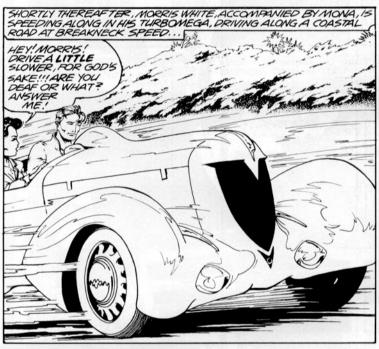

City_____State_____Zip____

For delivery in N.Y.C., add 8%. For delivery elsewhere in New York State, add 6%.

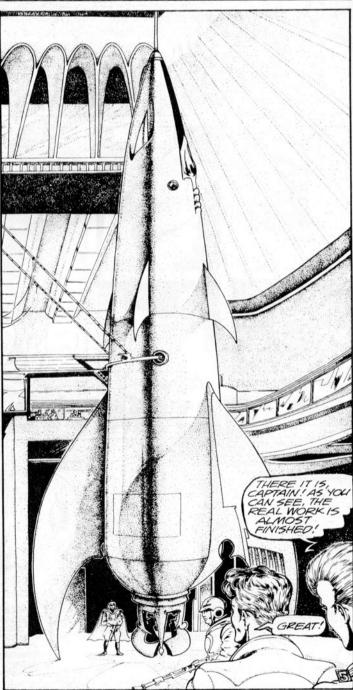

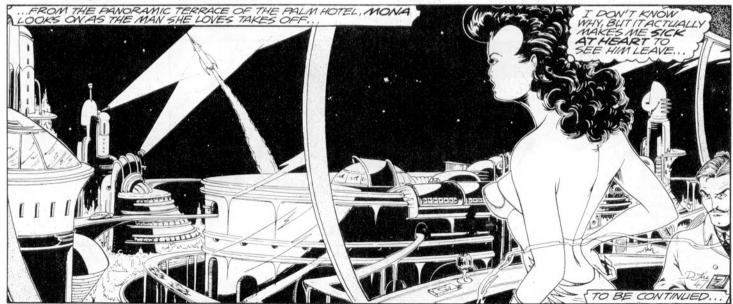

What's weirder than a time warp, unique as a unicorn? A magazine that's totally new in concept, a magazine that's brilliantly executed, a magazine that has real impact on its readers. Heavy Metal, the illustrated fantasy magazine, is one.

Published by Twenty First Century Communications, the creators of National Lampoon, it began in March of '77 with a limited distribution. Within months, its sales had tripled.

Heavy Metal has already gone far beyond any magazine of fantasy or science fiction in the quality of its artwork, the daring of its stories, the number of copies sold.

We have quoted a fan who wrote to us: "Heavy Metal is better than being stoned. Almost."

You can subscribe today.

All checks must be payable within continental U.S. or Canada. For each year, add $2.50 for Canada, Mexico, and other foreign countries.

Yes, I want to be a s	Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022 subscriber to Heavy Metal , the illustrated fantasy magazine. I realize that this me to deduct $8.00 from the subscription prices listed below.	·НМ 27
☐ I have enclosed	my check or money order.
☐ Charge to my Ma	ster Charge #
Ba	nkAmericard#
Bank #	Expiration Date
	month	year
Signature
One year (19 issu	res). $18.00. Deduct $8.0 ues). $26.00. Deduct $8.0	0—you pay $10.00 0—you pay $18.00
☐ Two years (24 is: ☐ Three years (36 i	ssues)	0-you pay $25.00
☐ Two years (24 iss ☐ Three years (36 i Send my subscription	ssues)$33.00. Deduct $8.0	0—you pay $25.00
☐ Three years (36 i Send my subscription	ssues)$33.00. Deduct $8.0	0 —you pay $25.00
☐ Three years (36 i	ssues)$33.00. Deduct $8.0	0 – you pay $25.00

N AGE PASSED UPON THE EARTH:

A SIGH IN ETERNITY. EARTH, CONQUERED, REMAINED BENEATH THE POWER OF THE GODS AND THOSE WHO SERVED THEM.

IN THE MOUNTAINS, IN THE WILD JUNGLES, IN THE

POR THEIR DELIVERANCE

YRAGAEL WAS DEAD:

AS DEAD AS ANY WHO HAD EVER LOST HIS SOUL

ANDHIS BODY.

OF HIS UNION WITH THE SORCERER AND THE CITY WAS BORN

THE TALE OF REBIRTH

THAT WAS TO COME THROUGH A BEING WHO WEPT BENEATH

THE STARS IN THE DESERT:

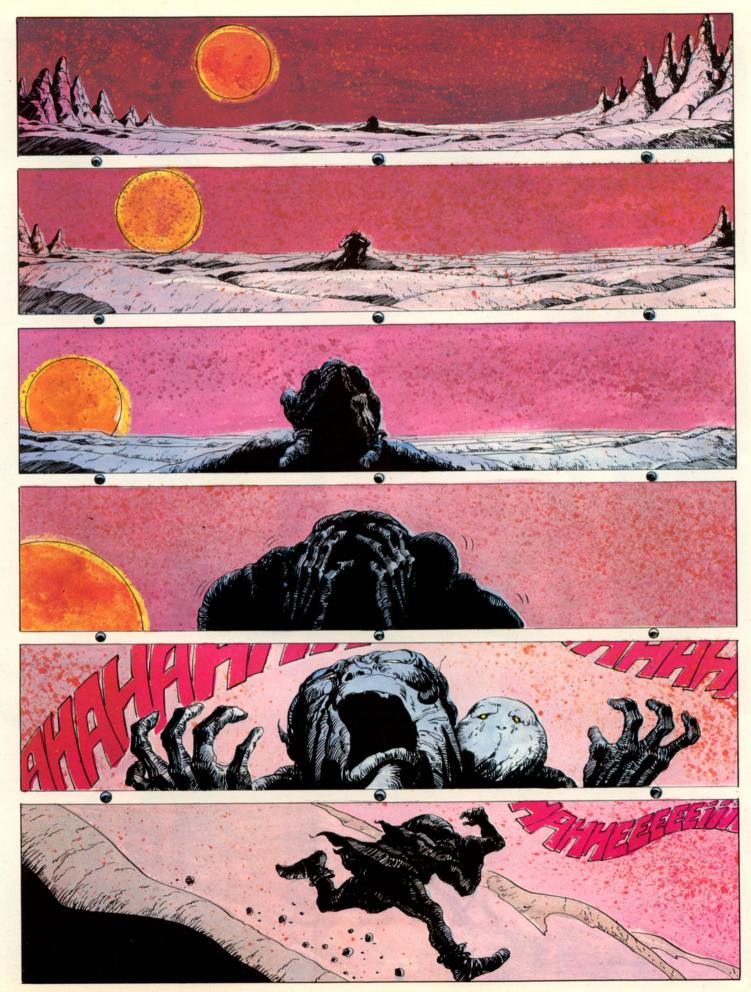

OUTCAST, REJECTED BY ALL, UNAWARE OF HIS OWN

FATHER'S NAME:

BUT ALL MEN WOULD COME TO LEARN THE NAME OF:

LIRM THE MAD

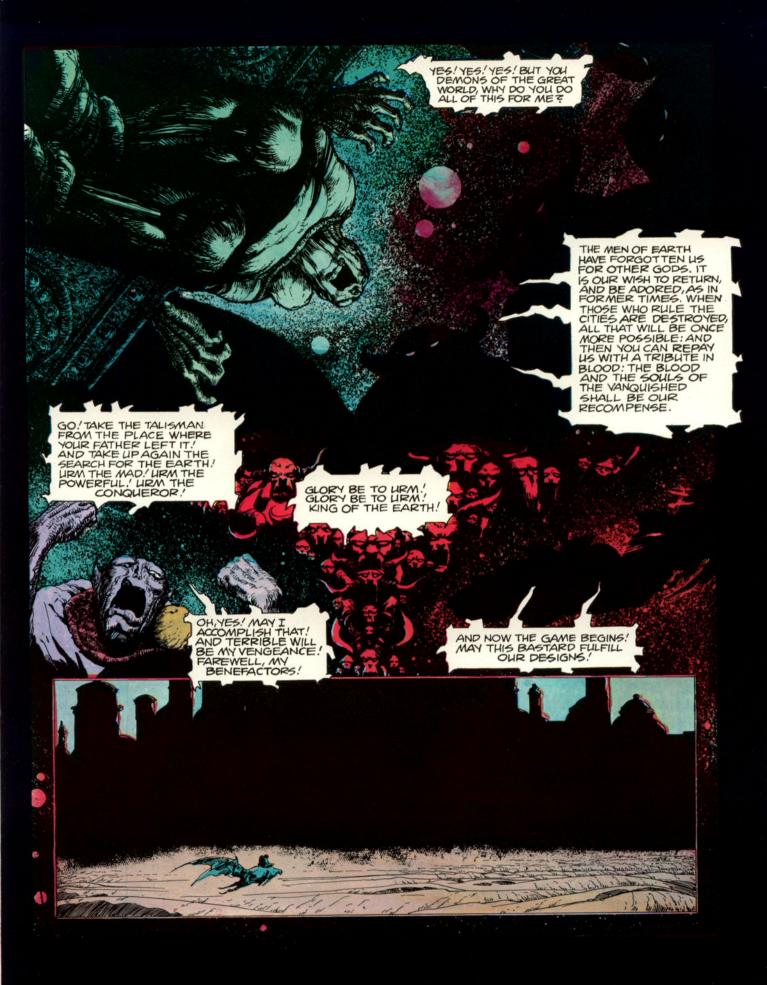

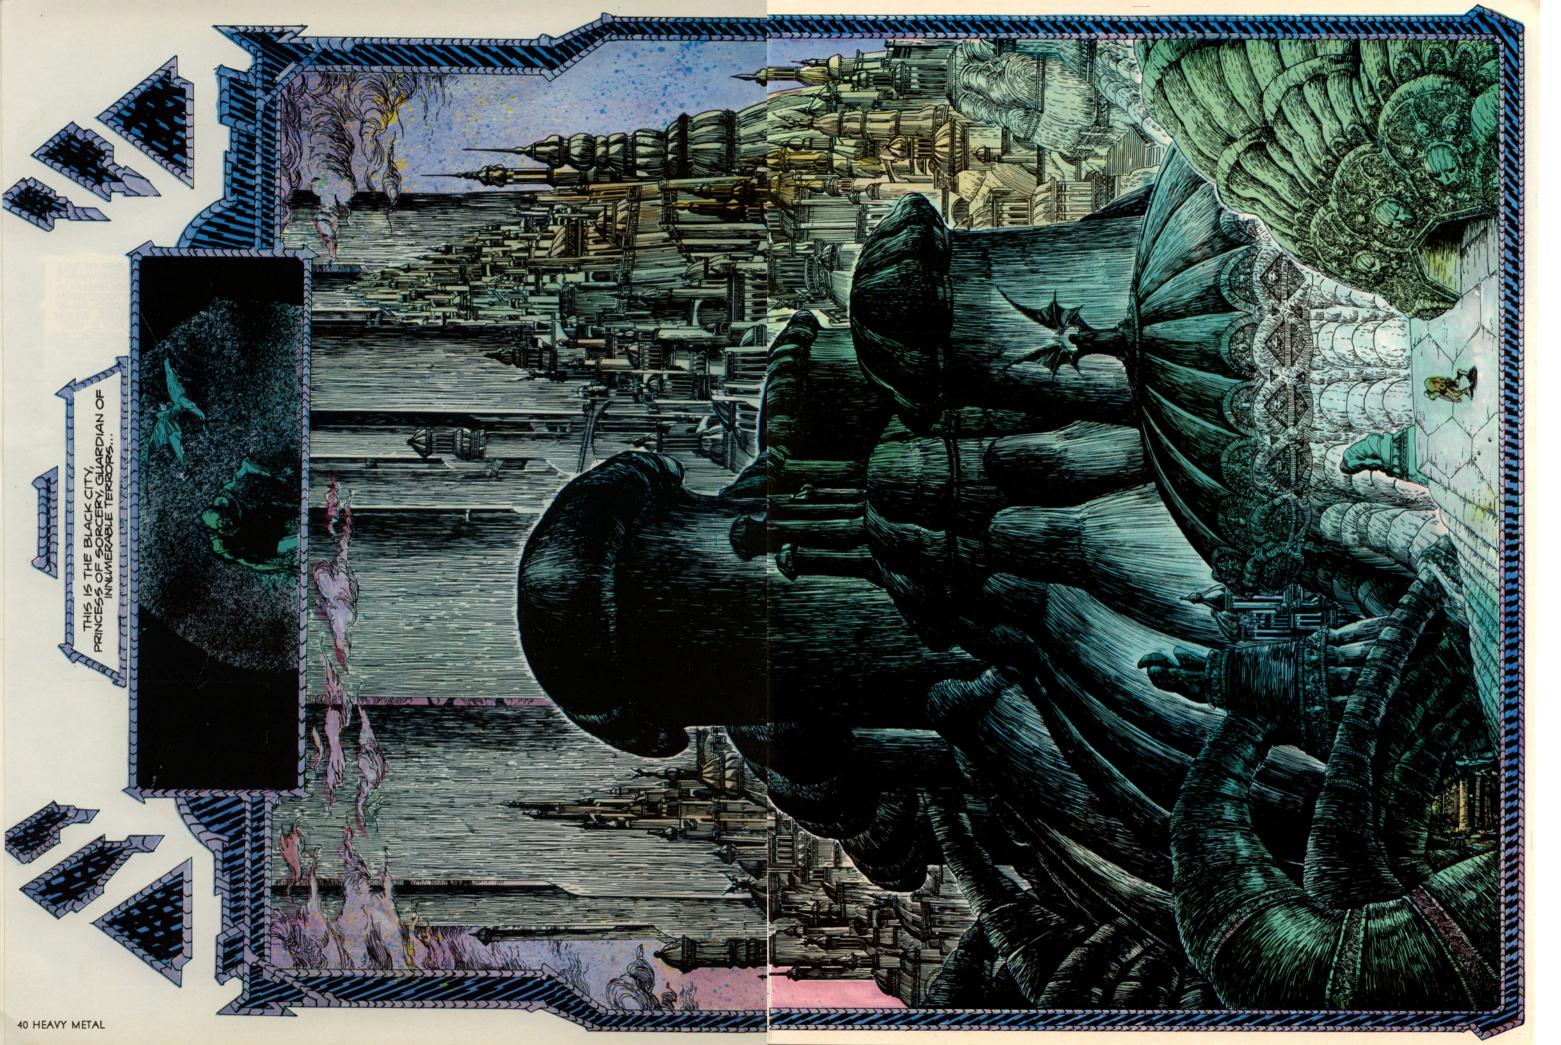

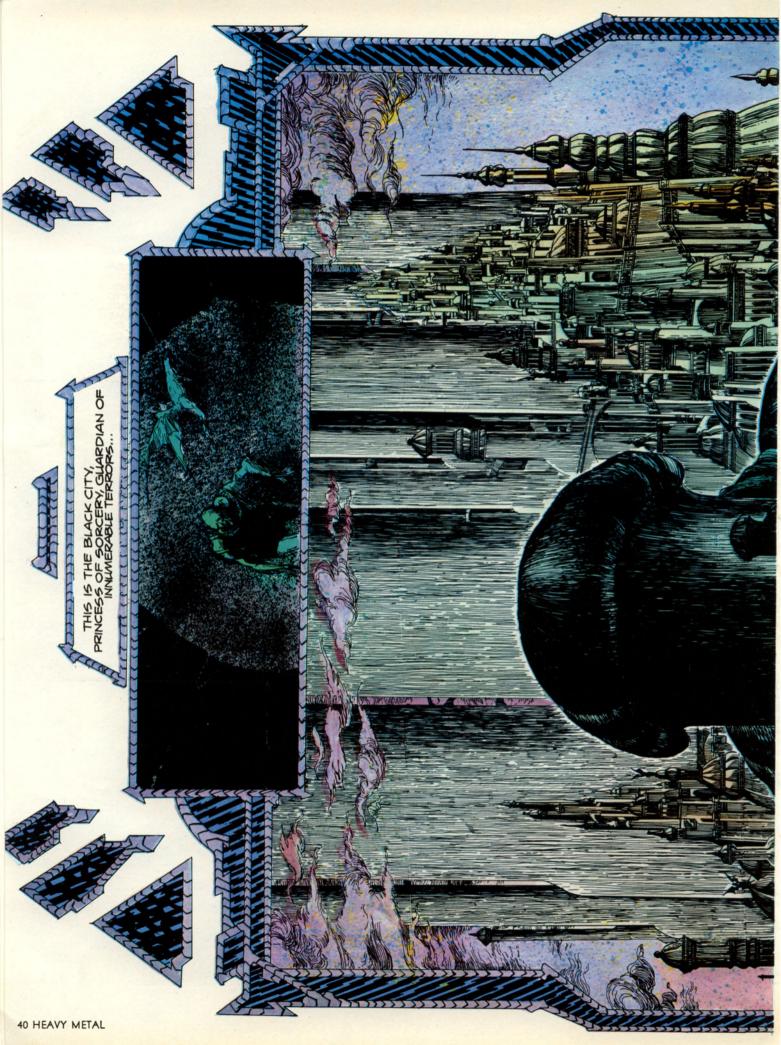

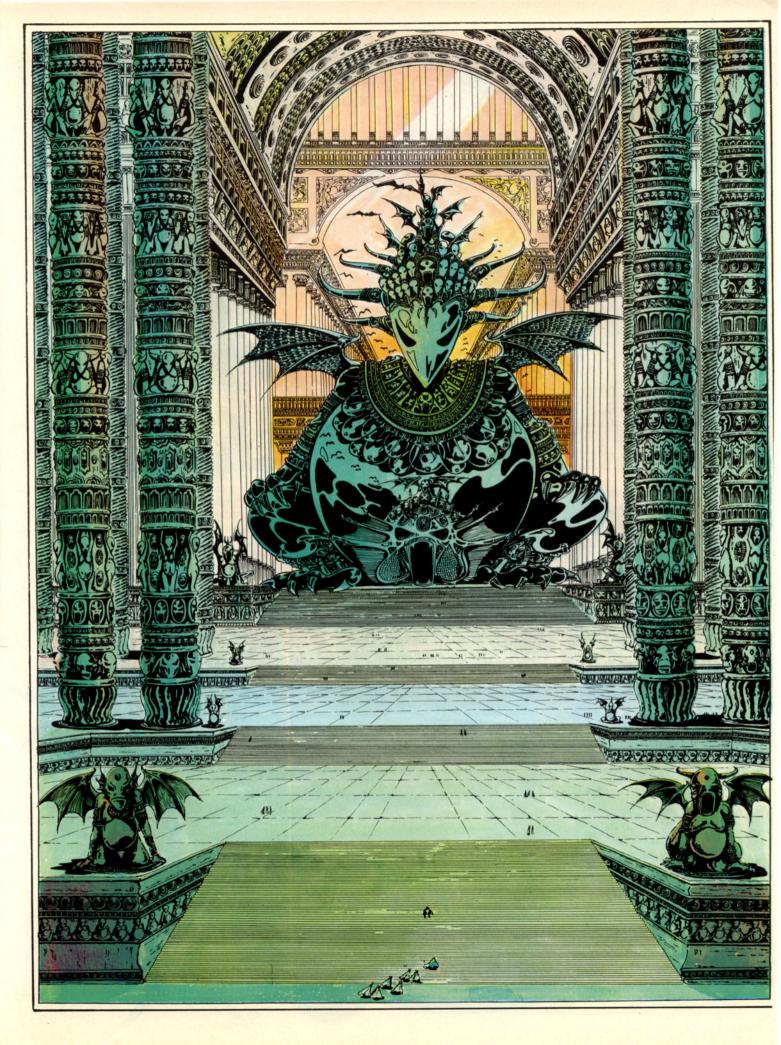

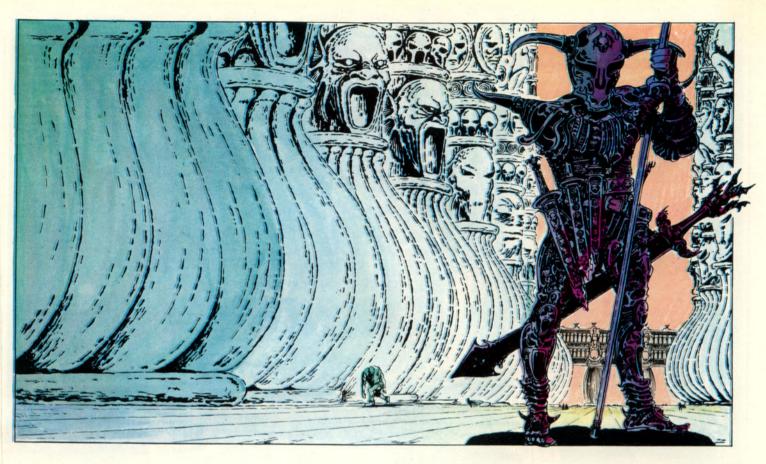

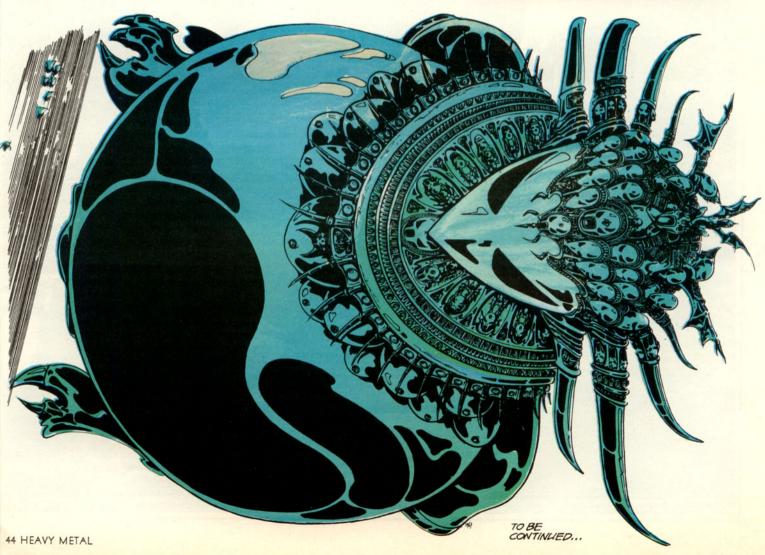

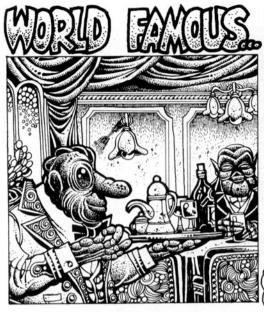

THOSE MAGICIANS ARE REALLY SOMETHING SPECIAL, DON'T YOU THINK?

WELL, YOU KNOW, OLD BOY,

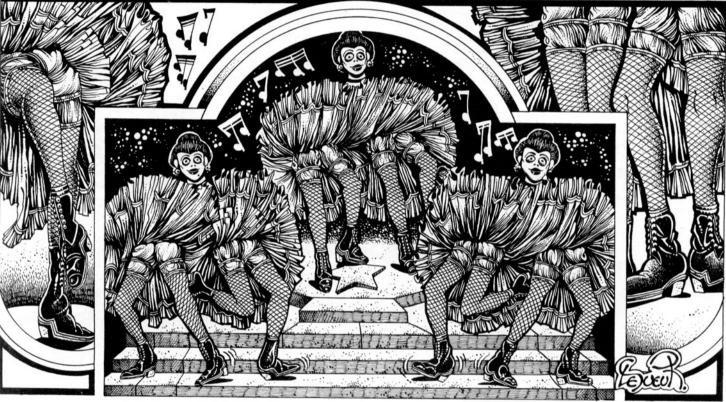

WHY DON'T YOU COME OVER)

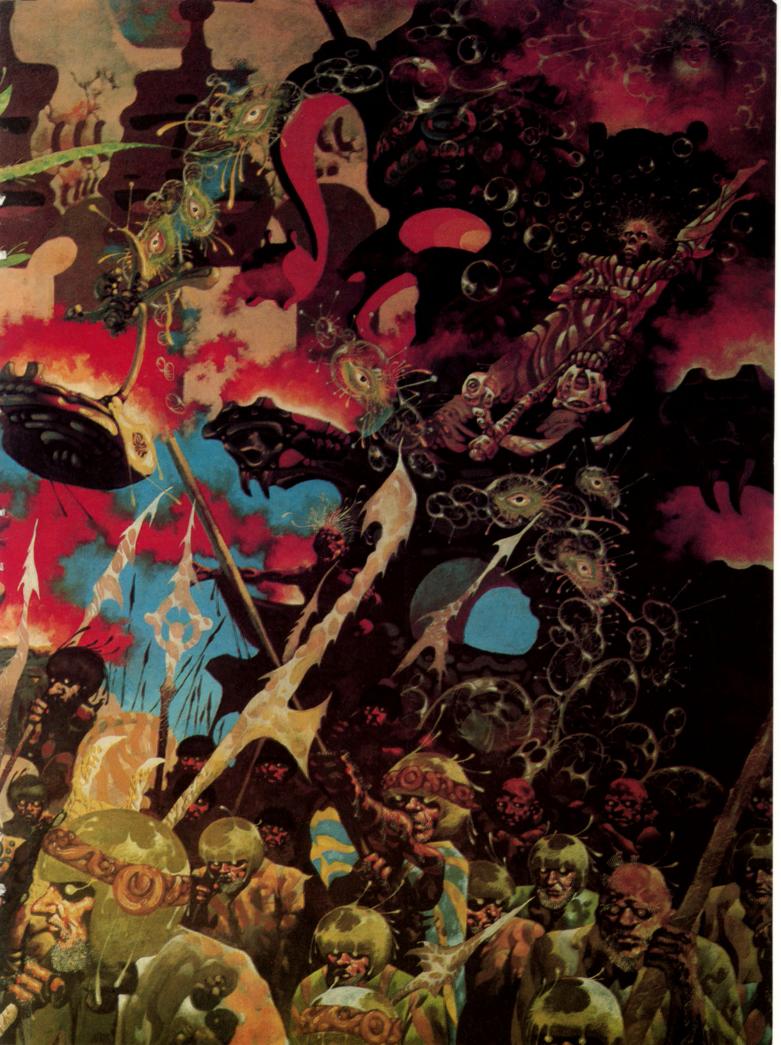

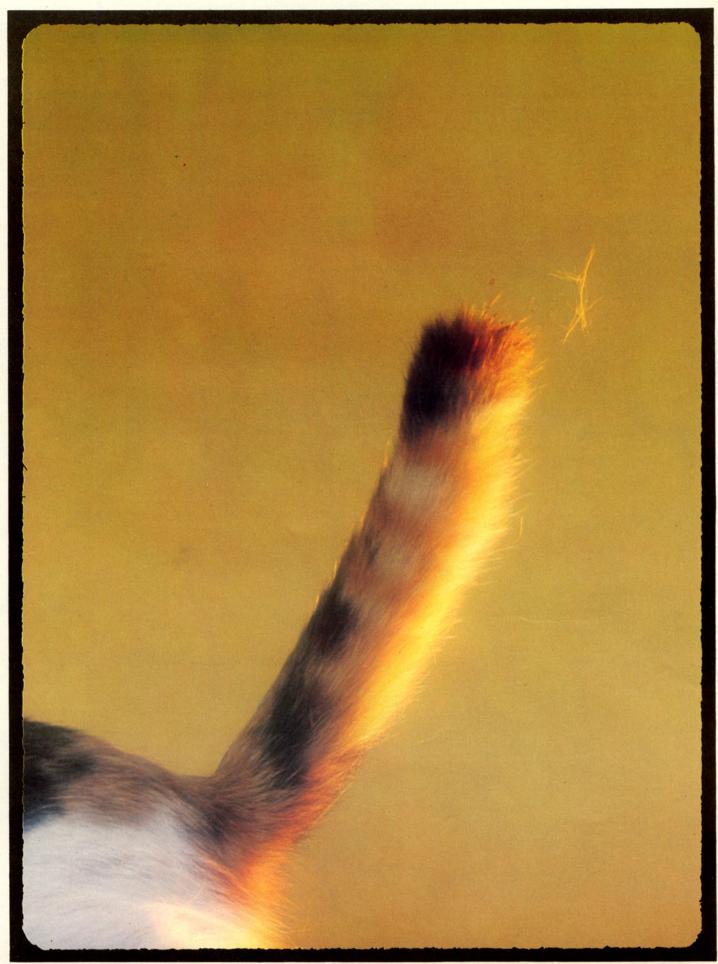

Photograph by Cathy McGinty

Venus-Ah, Venus

by Richard A. Lupoff

You can generally tell pretty early what kind of day it's going to be, and it had already been a lousy day for Al Lambert when he got home around three o'clock and found the alien slouched in his easy chair with its feet on the table.

Lambert lived in what his landlord managed to call a furnished efficiency on the top floor of an old brown-shingle on Walnut Street below Shattuck. That put the rooming house in one of Berkeley's rather nondescript multiracial neighborhoods. It was neither student ghetto nor poverty-belt nor old-line money nor radical-commune territory: just a rooming house in just a neighborhood. And Al lived there with a feisty orange-and-cream tomcat named Dart.

Or what was left of Dart, anyhow. Somehow, over the years before moving in with Lambert, Dart had managed to lose one eye, half an ear, and all but a couple of inches of tail. That didn't mean that Dart was anybody's patsy. On the contrary, he was as tough as he was mean, and he was as mean as could be. Whenever Dart stood with his feet dug in, claws extended, and that stump of a tail twitching like the lead bat in the warm-up circle when Mitchell Page was waiting for his turn against some poor simp of a pitcher, anybody with half a brain didn't stick around to quarrel, be he dog, cat, raccoon, or burglar.

Once in a very great while, Al Lambert would feel something incredibly heavy crawl into his lap and look down to see that it was Dart. That happened about once a year, twice if the planets were properly aligned, and it never, never happened if there was anybody else around to see it.

Al looked at the alien and just stood there. Coming home to find a creature with scaly blue skin, ruby-faceted eyes, and tentacles instead of fingers — those were just the most striking features of the alien, by the way; they were by no means the only things unearthly about it — was an unprecedented experience.

Even in Berkeley, California, USA, earth, in the latter half of the twentieth century.

The alien looked back at Al with no sign of startlement at all, and in the most equable voice imaginable, as if it were accustomed to addressing creatures as different from itself as it was, of course, from Al, said, "How are you doing today?"

Al groped for his other chair, a rickety wooden kitchen seat, since the alien was firmly settled in the easy chair. He planted himself shakily on the scratched and many-times-varnished seat, and since he couldn't think of anything else to do at the moment, he told the alien how he was doing. Honestly and succinctly.

"Lousy."

"That's too bad," the alien replied sympathetically, "would you care to expand at all on your statement?"

"I don't know why I should. After all, I come home from a hard day and find a perfect stranger sitting in my one and only comfortable chair. I won't make any point of your being nonhuman — in Berkeley we learn pretty fast to be tolerant of others. But still that gives you no right to barge in here uninvited, and, in fact, when I'm not even at home, and help yourself to my best chair."

Al was starting to get annoyed. That was a bad habit of his. He'd start talking about something in a perfectly neutral context and gradually work himself up to what on occasion amounted to nothing less than the proverbial towering rage.

"Come to think of it, what else have you been helping yourself to? I don't suppose you've drunk up my last quart of beer, by any chance. Or eaten up my wheat germ granola. Or gone hunting around for my stash and smoked it all. Or have you?"

"Certainly not," said the alien. His scales seemed to slide over one another when he spoke. His inflection remained its same calm self as ever, and his bland face seemed to be purely functional in nature; that is, his eyes, nose, and mouth were used for seeing, breathing, and speaking, respectively. They did not register emotion.

Instead, his sliding scales seemed to generate an electrical field of some sort which produced a visible aura about him. Lambert decided that colored auras were actually a pretty good way of expressing feelings. Instead of raising or lowering one's voice in a series of growls, snarls, squeaks, moans, and other modulations, all the while maneuvering one's facial muscles into an accompanying orchestration of smiles, smirks, winces, grimaces, frowns, sneers, moués, and tics, one need only flash the traditional red of anger, green of envy, gold of contentment, black of despair, and so on.

When the alien denied having consumed Lambert's perishables, he — for by now Al had decided that the alien was indeed a he and not an it — and certainly not a she, more's the pity — he flashed an aura of a deeply phosphorescent midnight purple, a tint distantly related to but easily distinguishable from his own pigmentation. Al took this aura to represent sincerity, possibly mixed with just a touch of injured innecesses.

"You don't wish to tell me why you're feeling so lousy?" the alien repeated in his blandly uninflected but otherwise idiomatic English.

"I already told you that I didn't see why I should tell you about my private affairs," Al replied. "On the other hand, I don't see any reason why I shouldn't, either. I certainly haven't been doing anything illegal. Even if you were from the CIA, the IRS, or the county sheriff's office, I could tell you everything I've done since I woke up this morning, and the chances are you'd be nothing but bored."

"Please," said the alien, "I'm really very interested."

His scales flashed a sort of mauve, giving Al a feeling that the alien was sympathetic and interested and quite willing to listen to a catalog of woes. Al had quite a catalog of woes, and while he had often been in the habit of enumerating them to Dart, the prospect of having an articulate listener for a change was attractive.

"Well, I went up to unemployment first thing and they said that my benefits were about to run out. Then I went up to the food stamps office and they said that there was a new set of federal guidelines and they were going to cut me off at the end of the month.

"I decided to take a walk on Telegraph and see what was new with the street artists and what was new in the bookstores and record stores, and I saw my girl with some creep fraternity kid. I don't know what she sees in those clean-cut types, but when I went over to say hello she cut me dead, so I guess that's all over between us.

"Finally, I came home and the landlord was sweeping the sidewalk and when he saw me he said if I didn't pay my rent by the end of the week he was going to evict. It's almost time for the new quarter to start at the university, and he wants to rent my room to somebody a little more, as he puts it, stable and reliable."

"I see," said the alien, his aura flashing a deeper and more sympathetic tone than ever. "That is a remarkable series of misfortunes. I should think you would be eager to accept an opportunity to change your luck."

Al got up from the wooden chair and walked over to the door. He opened it, looked into the hall to assure himself of privacy, then reclosed and double-locked it the way he sometimes did when he had company of an intimate sort and wished emphatically not to be interrupted, and returned to his place. He looked around the room itself and saw that aside from himself and the alien only Dart was present; the bulge of Dart's belly and the pleased quality of his purrs indicating that he had forayed out the window in Al's absence and returned with a full stomach.

"Change my luck?" Al hitched his wooden chair toward the overstuffed one occupied by the alien and leaned forward attentively. "Change my luck how? You aren't pushing something, are you?"

"My dear sir," the alien exclaimed, his voice as level as ever but his aura flashing with an intensity Al could barely compare even to the Glen McKay Head Lights show he had seen at a Jefferson Airplane concert once when his girl turned up with a spare ticket and invited him to attend as her guest. "My dear sir, I am not here in the role of an importer or distributor of anything. What I offer, in fact, is something very much the opposite."

The alien rose from Al's favorite easy chair and walked to a shadowy corner of the room, where he bent with surprising suppleness and opened a receptacle which Al had not previously noticed. It was of a dark, glossy material, and of a size and shape somewhere between that of a lady's large handbag and a smart businessman's attaché case. In fact, it bore a slight resemblance to a leather case which Lambert had once found misplaced or abandoned on a number 58 bus and pawned for a few dollars after a few days' perusal of the classifieds failed to turn up an offer of a reward.

The alien rose again and returned to the table, placing a small object on the center of the table, having first cleared a small area of old newspapers, empty cups, and filled ashtrays.

"What I have in mind," the alien said, "is that you might wish to leave this locale. Exchange it, so to speak, for more congenial surroundings. If you follow my drift."

"I guess I do," Al said, stalling for time. "But I want to ask you some questions first. Is that okay?"

His mind was racing back over the alien's words while his eye examined the object on the table. He tried to remember every story he'd ever read, heard, or seen dramatized of people getting suckered into fatally irretrievable commitments in their greed to take advantage of seemingly innocuous offers. Most of those he could recall involved deals with the devil. In most, the greedy human wound up forfeiting his soul and suffering the fires of eternal damnation as the penalty for his greed.

But this was no devil: this was a blue, scaly alien with red eyes and tentacles instead of fingers, and besides, Al didn't believe in souls anyhow so there was nothing to worry about in that concern. He couldn't remember very clearly any stories about deals with aliens, and the one or two that rustled tantalizingly around the rearmost nodes of his brain seemed to show Man emerging on top anyhow, once everything got sorted out.

Still, it didn't hurt to be cautious.

The alien had agreed to answer as many questions as Al wanted to ask him; he was in no hurry — earth was quite a comfortable little planet for him to visit and he was enjoying the stimulating intellectual companionship which he found here.

"Okay," said Al, "the first thing I want to know is, how come you speak English? I hope you aren't going to give me that corny old line about monitoring radio and television broadcasts. I've heard that in so many sci-fi flicks I'm sick of it.'

"As a matter of fact," the alien said, slithering rather gracefully onto the kitchen chair since Al had moved to the easy chair when the alien vacated it, "as a matter of fact. I tried to monitor your transmissions but I found them such a mélange of the vapid and the offensive that I had to give up. I hope that I haven't offended you by saying that. When I mention your transmissions, I refer to transmissions originating on this planet, not holding you personally to account for them."

The alien's scales slid and scraped a bit against one another and emitted an aura of blended orange and rose tints shot with a few pure white sparks. Clearly, the alien was being subjected to the strongest of emotions. Al hastened to reassure the alien that he was not offended, not because he cared particularly whether the creature felt unhappy or not, but rather because it seemed increasingly clear that the alien might have something worthwhile to dispense, and Al didn't wish to cut himself out of anything good.

"Well, no," the alien went on, "the way I learned English was via the little device that I brought with me." He reached behind one ear - the alien's ears weren't shaped anything like human ones and weren't located on the sides of the head, either - and after a moment's exertion removed a small metallic device about the size of a bottle cap. He held it under Al's nose for a couple of seconds, then stuck it behind his ear again.

"You see? This picks up whatever communication is going on around me and translates it into my own language so I hear both the ambient, or original, version — and a rendering into my own idiom. Pretty soon I can communicate in the local vernacular."

Al thought that was a very useful little machine and told the alien so. "Could you talk to anybody besides me?" Al

"Oh, yes," and a series of colors cascaded over the alien's body as if to emphasize as well as punctuate his affirmation. "Would you like me to talk to someone else? Here." And the alien, turning so as to face Dart, emitted a series of catlike purrs, meows, chuckles, and croons.

Dart lifted his distinctively characterized if rather unhandsome face in surprise and responded to the alien.

The alien produced a fresh series of feline noises and Dart dropped his head, slitted his remaining yellow orb, and pretended to go to sleep, all the while maintaining a careful surveillance of his surroundings as cats so often do.

"That was pretty funny," Al commented, "but how do I know you really said anything to each other? How do I know it wasn't just a lot of noise? What did Dart say, anyhow?"

The alien reached a surprisingly long arm toward the oneeyed cat and dangled a cluster of tentacles limply for the animal's approval before kneading Dart's back and shoulders and winning a series of loud purrs as his reward.

"He told me that he was over at the back door of the Burger Balloon today and met a delightful female with whom he shared the pleasures of the garbage pail as well as those of, ah, feline amour. He had an altogether delightful time, and further has an appointment with the female to perform an encore some hours hence."

"Ah, come on!" Al pointed a finger accusingly at the alien. "That's all a lot of phony junk. You can't talk to cats. They aren't intelligent creatures, anyhow."

"As you will," said the alien, his aura deepening to a disappointed chartreuse. "I didn't force the claim upon you. You asked and I merely told you the truth. Should I talk to this chair? Or the bed over there? They have minds, too, you know, and they can speak. Odd, you people have discovered that several times, the notion of the Greek ideal and that of the Japanese kami are both fairly close to it, but you don't seem to give it credence, Al."

"No, I sure don't. Look, I'm getting a little bit impatient with all of this jawing, and besides, there's a free dinner tonight up at the Unitarian Church, and another one at the Hare Krishna temple, and if I can get to the Unitarians in time I can chow down and then make it over to the Krishnas, too. They go in for a lot of chanting before they eat, you know."

"Yes," said the alien.

"So, my point is, fellow, if you have a proposition to make I wish you'd come to the point or else I have to ask you to

"I'm sorry to take so long," the alien said. "I really enjoy getting to know a new species. And you humans are quite interesting, you know. Not too high on the intelligence scale, of course. Quite a few others on this planet are ahead of you there. But I must say that I have never -- "

And the alien paused and leaned back, steepling its clusters of tentacles in an amazingly human gesture as he did so.

"- never come across a race so droll in some fifteen galaxies that I've visited. So - I might even say bizarre in your behavior."

Colors were running from the top of the alien's scaly blue head to the tips of its scaly blue feet, which Al Lambert noticed for the first time were naked and equipped with large, black, curved, pointed claws instead of toenails. Al ran his eye up the alien's leg from those claws and realized with a start that not only were the alien's feet unencumbered with raiment — all of the alien was naked. That must be why he'd fished in the briefcase-thing for the little gadget on the table, and why he'd worn the language machine behind his ear. Lack of pockets could be a dreadful nuisance.

"Okay, fine," Al urged the alien along. Lambert had, in all honesty, never given a great deal of thought to the perils of dealing with scaly blue beings from outer space, and in the rare moments when he had contemplated that contingency, he'd never anticipated the problem of dealing with one who talked around things so long that he might cost Al a free meal.

Or even two free meals — on the same night!

"Listen, you clearly have some kind of offer to make. Will you make it so I can either take you up on it or tell you no and go chow down?"

The alien said, "Of course, of course. Very simply, I represent an organization that controls intergalactic rights to the portal you see before you." He leaned forward and with a cluster of writhing blue tentacles adjusted some small extrusions on the sides of the device resting on Al's all-purpose table. A light sprang on in the center of the device. It looked like an open square, a window or picture frame. The light was a bright green, just below the level of intensity that would have made it impossible for Al to look at it for more than a few seconds at a time.

Al stood up and leaned over the table, gazing into the brilliant light. He thought he could almost make out something on the other side of the square. It wasn't the other side of his room.

He walked around the table and looked at the illuminated square from the other side. Here the illumination was equally as bright, but of a different color, a sort of rosy violet for which, Al thought, there ought to be a name. Maroon? No. Purple? Mauve? Surely not. Magenta! Yes, that was it. A brilliant magenta light, also so brilliant that he could barely tolerate looking into it.

"You see?" the alien inquired. "I need merely turn on the portal, and anything that we pass through the opening is whisked away!"

He picked up a dried crumb of week-old lasagna that lay on the table and flipped it through the magenta side of the portal. In the blinking of an eye it was gone, quite without sound, flash, vibration, odor, or any other sign of its passing.

The alien picked up another scrap from the table, a bent paper clip that had at one time held a slim sheaf of papers together. He held it in the center of a group of tentacles and flipped it through the green side of the portal. Like the lasagna, it was gone.

Lambert sidled around the table until he was standing directly over the portal, looking down on it, his right eye on the green side, his left on the magenta. It was an odd sight — the table top was illuminated for a few square inches around the portal, one side each color. There was no sign of either the crumb of lasagna or the bent strip of copper wire.

"That little gadget, eh?"

"Quite so."

"Gone?"
"Gone."

"That isn't a miniature furnace or anything like that, is it?

Your gadget, I mean?"

"Oh, no! Wouldn't think of such a thing. Instantaneous transportation of matter. Here to—there." The alien was sitting with his fingers steepled again, his feet crossed and resting on the edge of Al's table. For a moment Al considered asking the alien to remove his feet from the table, not that he was getting it dirty, really; not that there was anything there that would be harmed by a little more dirt, considering the condition in which Al kept his so-called furnished efficiency; but merely on the grounds that it would give him a psychological advantage to put the alien in a bad light and cast himself in the role of an authority figure.

But then he decided that the alien might not follow out the suggestion, and that would put Al in a weaker position than ever. Better not to risk it.

"Here to - where?" Al asked the alien.

"Anywhere you like. Any inhabited planet within fifteen galaxies. Or any uninhabited one, for that matter. Anywhere at all. Want to go to the back side of the moon? Walk the deserts of Mars? Explore beneath the cloud cover of Venus?

See the rings of Saturn up close?"

"Nah." Al shook his head. "Those things are all spoiled. Used to be great. I used to read comic books about places like that. Secret cities on the moon. Ancient ruins and gaunt nomads plodding across red Martian dunes. Venusian swamps. Those were best of all. Steaming jungles. Endless monsoons. White traders soaking up local rum in spaceport saloons while froggies harvested the gubba-gubba weed. Those were the days!"

The alien asked Al why he used the past tense. That was one of the remarkable things about the alien's use of English—not only did he possess a vocabulary every bit as extensive as Lambert's, if a trifle less colorful—he was thoroughly conversant with technicalities of mood, voice, and tense. Things that sometimes puzzle even professional purveyors of prose and poetry. Amazing.

In response to the alien's question about his use of tense, Al Lambert explained that the explorations of NASA and its Soviet counterpart had stolen all of the glamour from the planets. We'd known all along that the front side of the moon was a fierce and sterile wasteland of mountains and craters and rocks. Now we knew that the back side was another wasteland of mountains and craters and rocks. We'd suspected all along that Mars would present a hostile environment for life, but now we knew that it was so hostile that there could be no nomads. Maybe once upon a time there had been, and maybe the planet would be explored someday and artifacts would be found, but no hypothetical potsherd lying buried beneath millions of years of sand could compete with a living Martian. And Venus — ah, Venus, that was the sharpest sting of all. No need even to contemplate Venus.

The alien's aura positively shimmered sympathy at Lambert. "But you see, there is no need to fret over the loss. The galaxy contains billions and billions and billions of stars, Al. And most of them have planets. And there are so many galaxies! You can find any kind of world you want, don't you see? It doesn't matter what your specifications are, short of actually violating the basic laws of nature. What if the odds are long? If you want a one-in-a-million planet, it exists. One in a hundred million. One in a billion.

"Instantaneous transport," the alien repeated, tapping the upper framework of his portal. Somehow he reminded Al Lambert of a used car salesman proudly demonstrating a latemodel sports car. Al felt a little suspicious.

"That may work for lasagna crumbs and bent paper clips, but how am I going to fit through there? I'm a lot bigger than a lasagna crumb or a paper clip!"

"But of course," the alien said. "Through the proximity field relativity principle, anything that passes through the portal is reduced to the dimensions of the portal as it passes through, and then restored to its normal size as it emerges on the other side.

"That, after all, is how I got here."

Al said hmmm.

"Now, just where did you say you wished to go?" the alien asked.

Al didn't reply.

"Al-ghoul XXIII? NGC 6607? Beta Ceti?"

"Actually," Al ventured, "I really am kind of fond of the old Venus. I suppose there's something just a trifle decadent in my makeup that those images resonate with. If you know what I mean, of course."

"I do, I do," the alien said, his aura glowing with empathy.
"But Venus isn't like that at all," Al resumed. "Always seemed to me a cross between the South Seas and outer space, best parts of both, worst of neither."

The alien went to his briefcase again and pulled out a crackle-covered notebook. He started flipping pages.

Al leaned over and tried to look over the alien's shoulder, but the alien turned the book so Al couldn't see into it. "Sorry," he said, his aura glowing softly in a gray compounded of apology and helplessness, "it's a firm rule. Policy, you know. I'd let you look in the catalog if it were up to me. There's nothing secret about it. But the rules are the rules."

Al harrumphed and sat down.

"Ah," the alien said, his aura brightening up greatly, "here's just the thing for you. Rather far, don't think you have a formal designation for the place? Small pinkish star in a second-generation ellipsoid spiral nebula out in the general direction of, ah, Spica, eh? But much, much farther, of course."

The alien twiddled with the knobs and slides on the edges of the miniature window frame. Al tried to peer through the opening, first from the greenish side, then from the magenta. He could see plenty of color and what he thought might be shapes moving around, but everything was so vague, thanks to the dazzling brightness, that he couldn't be sure of anything he saw.

"How do I go?"

"Simplest thing in the world. In the world. Little joke, that." The alien's aura gave a display of yellow with redorange polka dots when he told a joke. Roughly the equivalent of laughter, Al decided. "All you have to do is start through. Should be easy for you — just poke one of those things, fingers, into the frame and off you go."

Al reached forward. A movement behind the alien arrested his progress, however. He looked and saw that it was Dart the tomcat tiptoeing around — it's amazing how lightly even the bulkiest of toms can tiptoe when he really wants to — and for some reason that made Al Lambert ask a final question before he stuck his finger in the portal.

"What do I have to pay for this?"

A positive rainbow rippled down the alien's form, then reverberated back from his clawed feet to his scale-covered blue noggin. "There is no fee. My organization provides this service without charge to the user."

Al took a deep breath, held his nose with one thumb and forefinger, poised his other forefinger at the edge of the glowing portal, and lunged.

Something went zap! Al's hair stood on end as if he were in the middle of a zone of static electricity; he felt every nerve in his body tingle, every muscle spasm, his ears rang, his eyes bugged, his head swam, he smelled something that he tentatively identified as ozone, his taste buds went wild trying to label something that was sweet, sour, salty, and bitter all at once. The closest thing to the experience that he could recall was a special Bloody Mary that his girl friend had once ordered from a bartender she knew and that Al had tasted, expecting only a mild, tomatoey flavor.

And suddenly he found himself in a completely different place.

It was a dark room. A bar, in fact, from first impressions, lighted by flickering cressets and candles. Apparently the place was without electricity. It didn't have the feel of a Trader Vic's, where fortunes are expended to attain the atmosphere of a South Seas dive. It had more of the ambience of a real South Seas dive — but it wasn't exactly like that either.

The walls were made of some kind of rough, fibrous material. The floor was covered with mats of the same stuff. The bar itself seemed to be made of wood, but of no type Lambert could remember. He himself was sitting at a tiny, grimy table in the darkest corner of the largely empty room.

There were two or three men lounging at the bar, wearing a variety of stained and ragged khaki. Each looked more unkempt and unshaven than the next. They were drinking steadily and conversing in low voices. The only other sound came from outside — a steady drumbeat of gigantic raindrops pounding off the roof of the building, off the narrow wooden walkway outside, onto the dark, muddy ground beyond.

Lambert couldn't see far outside — it seemed to be daytime, but the sky was so heavily overcast, the sun so weak and so hidden, that visibility was lost in the rain after a few yards. Only an occasional streak of livid verdant lightning illuminated what lay beyond the muddy clearing: a jungle, dense, steaming, clotted with hungry vines and fat, fleshy leaves of unhealthy dark reds and yellows. Whenever the lightning struck, hideously bloodcurdling screams rose from the jungle, only to be cut off a few seconds later by the thunderous reverberating report that followed each lightning bolt.

Lambert slouched farther into the shadows, prepared to observe and orient himself before he took any overt action. Caution was the byword.

One of the men at the bar had obviously taken offense at something said by another. He slammed down his glass of wicked-colored hooch and shouted at his companion. "I don't care what them damned bleeding hearts has to say. These Veenies is just a pack of animals. Reptiles. Giant trained frogs. You can teach 'em to tend bar and to harvest the syzzyl weed for us and that's all they're good for, and killing one of 'em doesn't amount to anything!"

"I'm not so certain of that," his companion was saying in reply. "They seem to be quite intelligent. They have a culture of their own, primitive to be sure. But they have gods and legends and even a few crude sculptures. That's why the museum sent me here, of course, to gather enough Veenie artifacts for a display."

"Garbage!" the first man roared back. "They're just a bunch of toads, and they even know it themselves. Here, I'll prove it to you, you lousy toad-lover!"

He pounded a huge, dirty fist on the wooden bar. "Hey! Fytzl! Get the hell over here before I roast your legs for dinner!"

The bartender dropped a towel and glass he'd been holding and scuttled over to face the two men. For the first time, Al Lambert was able to see the bartender clearly. He had a curiously flat, broad head with bulging eyes, no visible nose, and a mouth that would have split his face from ear to ear when he opened it if he'd had any ears.

"Yzz, zzyr," the creature croaked at the human. When he opened his mouth, Al could see that he had an incredibly long red tongue hinged at the front of his upper jaw.

"Tell this bleeding heart that you're just a bunch of frogs an' toads, Veenie, before I open up your liver with my shiv!"

The bartender started to shake. He put his hands on the bar to steady himself and Al could see that the fingers were long and thin and connected with a membranous webbing. Fytzl's skin was a slimy-looking olive green mottled with almost black spots the size of small frisbees.

"Yzz, zzyr, bwnnna," the bartender croaked. "Jzzt beazztz, thztz all Veeneez arrr. Beaztz, towdzz, yzz zzyrz!" He ducked his head and scuttled away again.

"You see?" the first man exclaimed triumphantly, "just what I told you! They even admit it!"

"Well, I'm not totally convinced even so," the second man replied. "But look," he said, pointing to the open door of the bar, "here comes a Veenie work squad back from the jungle."

Lambert's eyes followed those of the two men. By a flash of lurid lightning he could see a row of the froglike creatures emerging from the leaves and vines of the noisome growth. They were being battered by the unrelenting downpour, and their backs were bent beneath titanic loads of slimily dripping leaves and fronds. Open wounds and hideous bruises marked them one and all.

A man in a bright yellow slicker and hood was herding the Veenies, coiled whip in one hand, elaborate ray pistol in the other. There was something strangely, hauntingly familiar in the man's tough appearance, his slightly off-center gait.

Something came to galvanized life within Al Lambert. It was the Veenies' own problem, there was nothing he could do about it, and besides, maybe the first man at the bar was right anyhow, and the froglike creatures were mere animals. Still, even in the selfish breast of Al Lambert, something stirred and bubbled and sprang into action.

He pushed the table angrily away from himself and ignored the crash and the clatter with which it rolled across the barroom floor. Al was already moving across the room and out the open door, across the wooden walk and onto the mud outside. He felt the heavy raindrops begin to smash onto his head and shoulders but it bothered him remarkably little, as if he had been born to this steaming, semi-amphibious milieu.

Gathering all of his energy and all of his anger, he sprang across the muddy clearing and confronted the man herding the hapless Veenies. They stood face to face for a few seconds. Al looked into the eye of the slicker-garbed stranger, a single, mean, sly, yellow eye that seemed to bore into Al's brain. The man's nose was curved and showed an ugly indentation where it had once been broken. A wicked scar curved from a half-missing ear across one cheek, tugging the man's mouth and, in fact, his whole face into a perpetual nasty sneer.

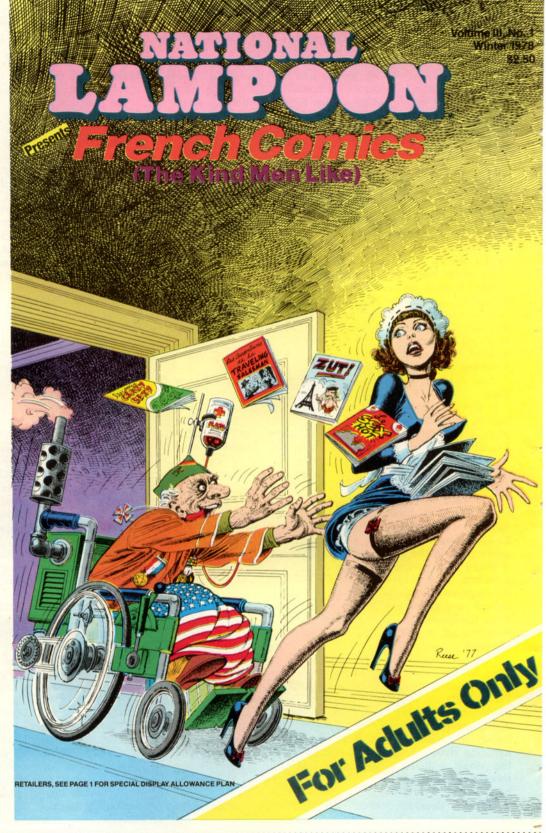

"Well, what do you want? Be quick about it!" the man snarled.

"Yyu mzzt ztopp enzzlavvng dzze pur Vveeneez!" Lambert heard himself croak.

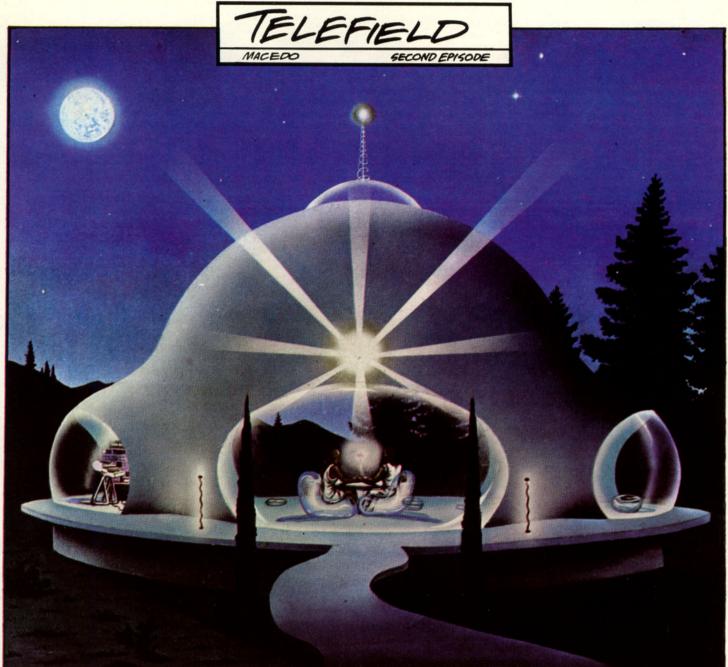

The Rest of the Best of French

The fantastic work of Moebius, Druillet, Nicollet and Co. in Heavy Metal shows the French approach to adventure comics-adult, bizarre, experimental, daring. But wait 'til you see how Gotlib, Mandryka, Solé, and others handle "the funnies"! They're sexy, outrageous, weird, wonderful, and hilarious.

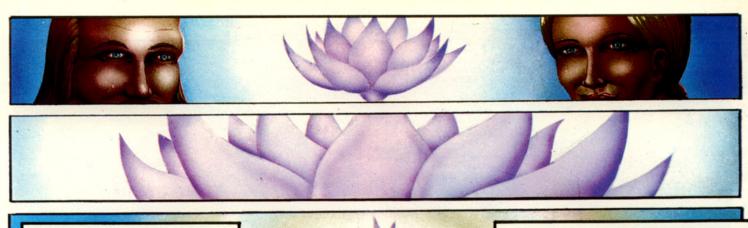

Only the publishers of the National Lampoon could have brought you Heavy Metal. And only they can bring you French Comics: (The Kind Men Like). You can order your copy today

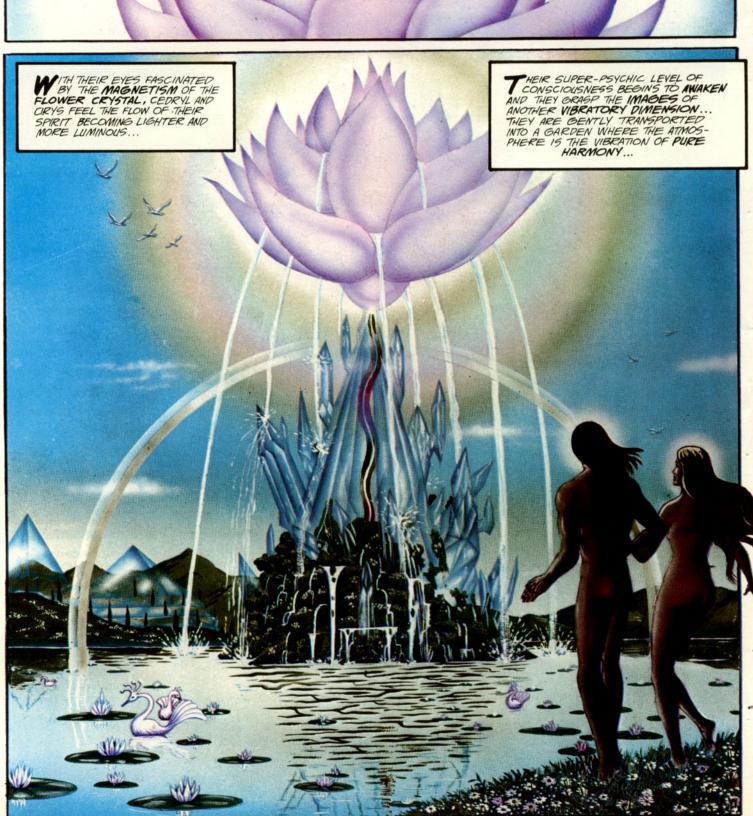

Heavy Metal Dept. HM 278	If you do not wis	sh to cut the coupon in this ad, bu	ut do wish to order pleas	se print or 635 Madison Avenue New York, N.Y. 10022	type all the necessary information and enclose it with a check or money order.
l enclose a total of $ Each copy is $3.00 ($2.50 each plu	us 50¢ for postage and ha	andling). Please send to:
Alama
Name	(please print)	1.		27
	(please print)		V .	· ·

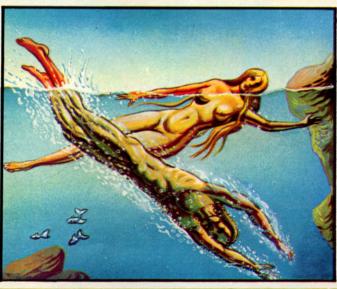

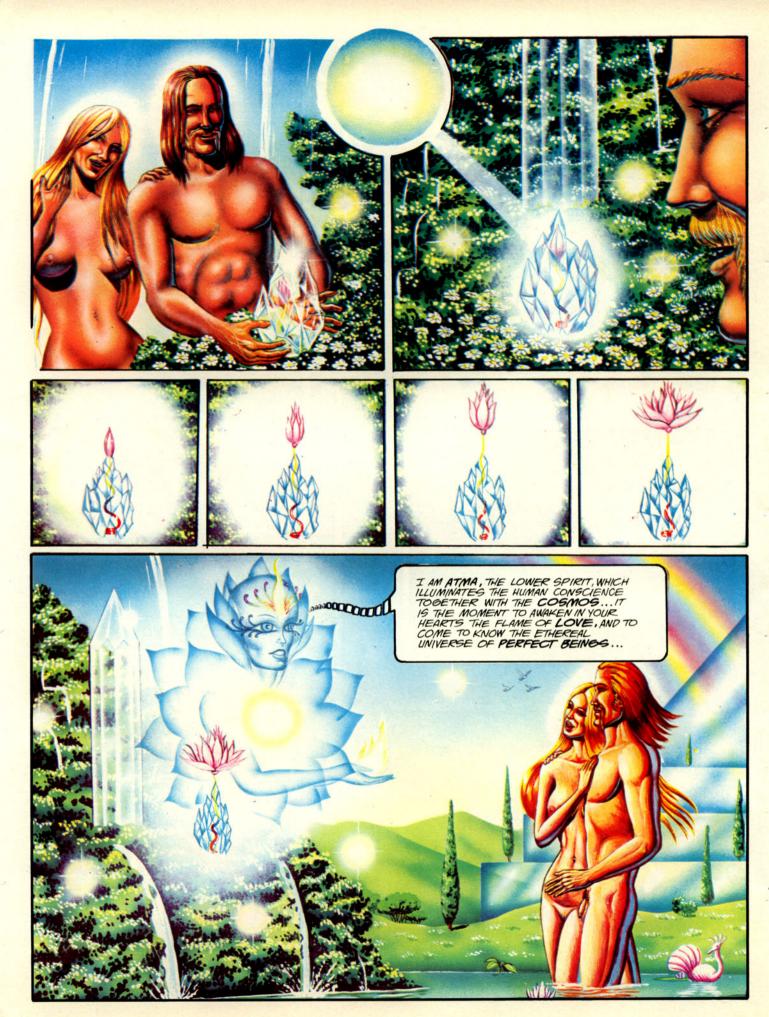

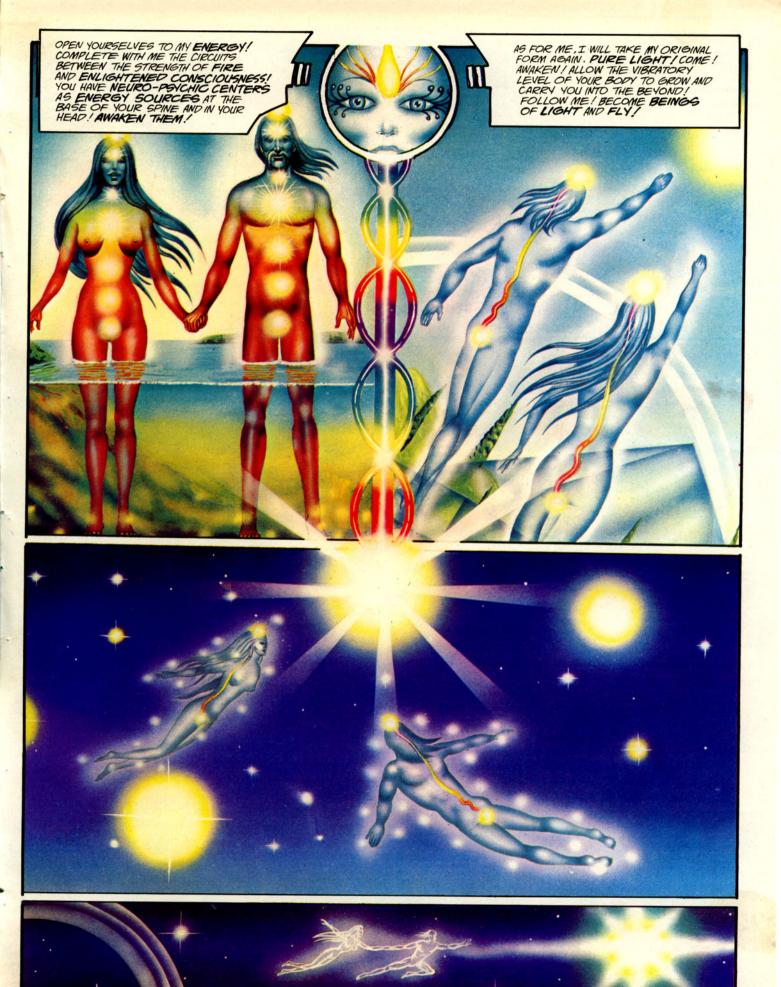

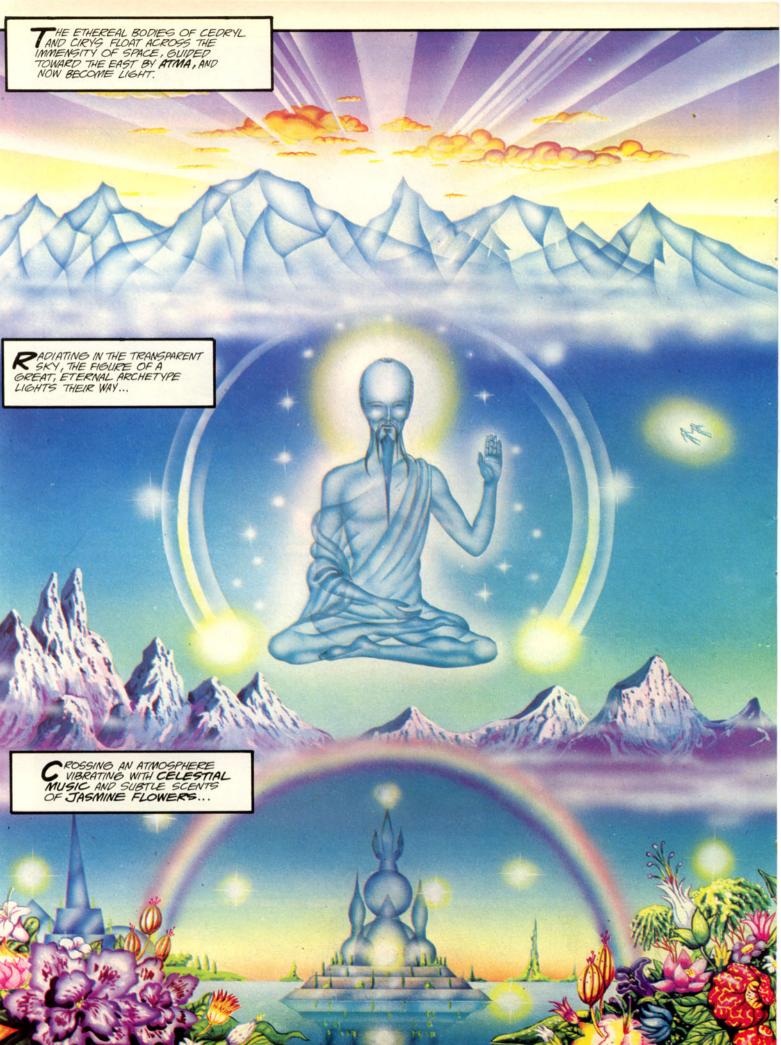

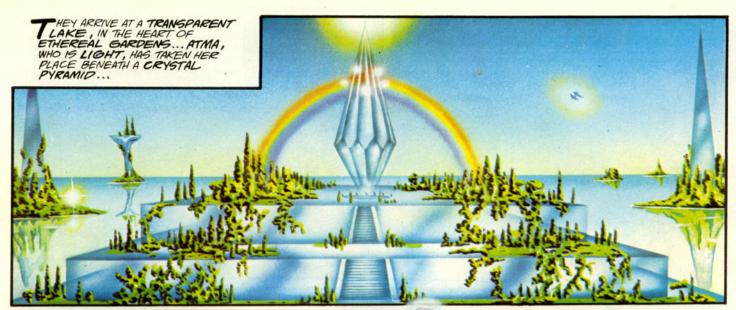

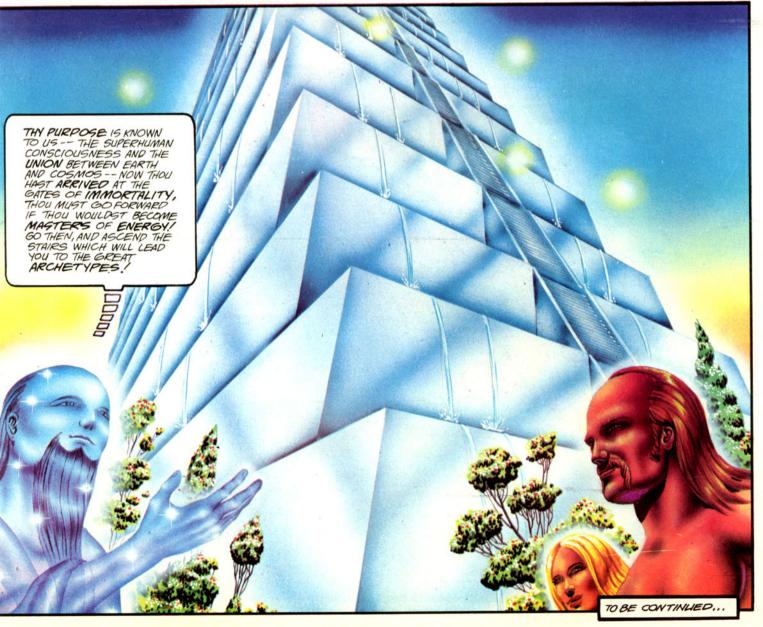

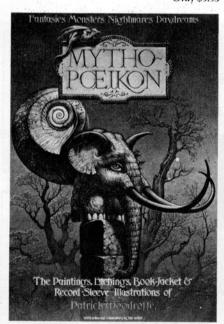

Great Gift Books of Fantasy Art

9110. LONE SLOANE/DELIRIUS. In one volume, two complete, sensational, illustrated fantasy epics by Heavy Metal author-artist Philippe Druillet. The adventures of the cosmic wanderer, Lone Sloane, as told in Druillet's inimitable surrealist—illumination style; and the history of the world rightly called Delirius, its violent rise and terrible fall. 140 full color, breathtaking pages. 8\%" x 11". Softbound.

Only $9.95

9102. MYTHOPOEIKON by Patrick Wood-roffe. Mythopoeikon presents the paintings, etchings, book jacket, and record sleeve illustrations by one of the world's most popular fantasy/science fiction artists, with notes and commentary by the author. Mythopoeikon shows how Woodroffe has evolved a unique style, combining minute surface detail and texture with images that evoke a grotesque and startling fusion of the everyday and the bizarre. A brilliant visual experience—a book that will dazzle the eye and the mind of anyone who sees it. 8½" x 11¾". Softbound. Only $9.95

9103. ARIEL, THE BOOK OF FANTASY–Volume Two. The fanzine in a class by itself, beautifully designed and brilliantly edited, with full-color illustrations by Frazetta, Corben, and Jones, fiction by Moorcock, Ellison, Bradbury, and LeGuin, essays on Frodo and Frankenstein, wonderful photos, posters, comics, and interviews. 87/8" x 113/4". Softbound.

Only $6.95

9104. ALBUM COVER ALBUM. The most imaginative, outrageous art of our time is on album covers, and here, full size, full color, are 700 of the greatest: Warhol for the Stones, Crumb for Janis, Peter Max for Meade Lux Lewis. Art that catches and that matches the excitement of the greatest in jazz and rock. Edited by Roger Dean. 12" x 12". Softbound. Only $10.95

9107. FRANK KELLY FREAS, THE ART OF SCIENCE FICTION. The master of science fiction art, acknowledged dean of science fiction illustrators, and winner of ten prestigious Hugo awards Frank Kelly Freas offers his first collection of award-winning paintings and drawings, with 35 full-color, full-page prints, over 40 additional color plates, and numerous black and white illustrations. For the serious art student and collector as well as the science fiction fan, Freas describes the evolution of his technique, his view of science fiction illustrations, and his personal approach to the art. 120 pages. 8½" x 11". Softbound.

9109. BROTHERS OF THE DEAD by Brian Aldiss. Illustrations by Ian Pollock. Brian Aldiss's tale of two brothers, joined at birth from breastbone to hip—their rise to fame in the frenzied world of rock, their hatred for one another, their sexual involvements, and the malignant power that led to their grotesque end. The story is told by the rock promoter who exploited them; by Zak Bedderwick, who trained them—with a stun gun; by Laura Ashley, their lover; and by the twins' sister, who ties together their bizarre story. 10½" x 10½". Softbound.

	ks, Dept. HM 2/78
635 Madison Ave.	New York, N.Y. 10022
Please send me th	e book bargains circled below.
	60¢ per title for shipping charges plus ar r title for deliveries outside continenta
	Send check or money orde Heavy Metal Books,
Sales tax: For deli- where in New Yor	very in N.Y.C., add 8%. For delivery else k State, add 6%.
91109102	_9103910491079109
Name
Address	the state of the s
City	StateZip

Continued from page 1

tainly a little more mature, than this repetitious outpouring of high school frosh bullshit.

Derek K. Long Teaneck, N.J.

Hang in there, Derek. We have some college frosh bullshit coming soon. In fact, publishing this letter of yours is a step in that direction. — Eds.

Dear Maniacs:

It figures that a lunatic magazine like Heavy Metal would be edited by lunatics. Sean Kelly and Valerie Marchant are crazier than Gilles de Rais and Lucretia Borgia. Most of the art in HM is great; too bad the stories suck. Ellison's "How's the Night Life on Cissalda?" could have been the star feature in Weird Sex Confessions of a Demented Pervert, or even Hustler. Like to meet Nicollet.

Denny Oaley Chi-town, Ill.

Funny, Harlan always speaks so well of you, Denny. — Eds.

To the Editors:

Walking slowly towards the door, I am conscious of nothing but the need to know what lies beyond and in. I turn the handle and throw the door open. Death faces me in the most physical sense . . . and I realize as I turn that I'm at the gates of hell . . . the fire engulfs me, and I burn. Heavy Metal is better than being stoned.

Lawrence Pugh Longview, Washington Well, anyway, it beats that angel dust stuff, huh, Larry? -Eds.

COLLECTOR'S ITEMS

HM #1/APRIL, 1977: With Space Punks, the first chapters of Corben's Den and Bode's Sunpot, an excerpt from the best-selling fantasy novel The Sword of Shannara, Harzak, and more. $4.00

HM #2/MAY, 1977: Introducing Roger, the paranoid puppet, Virgo, the cosmic maiden, Russian astronauts, Conquering Armies, the ultimate rock festival, while Harzak, Sunpot, and Den continue. ($4.00)

HM #3/JUNE, 1977: Features Night Images, poetry by Conan's creator, Robert E. Howard, with illustrations by Corben; Macedo's Rockblitz, the highly praised Shells, the first chapter of Davis's World Apart, more Den, Sunpot, and Harzak. ($3.00)

HM #4/JULY, 1977: Is a must for Moebius fans, with 12 pages of Harzak and his s/f spy saga, The Long Tomorrow, also the end of Sunpot, further adventures of Den, the psychic Nep Simo, and the horrible Gold Queen. ($3.00)

HM #5/AUGUST, 1977: In which the saga of Polonius begins, The Long Tomorrow concludes, World Apart and Den continue, all amidst talking plants, samurai, puppets, sex, and violence. ($3.00)

HM #6/SEPTEMBER, 1977: Galactic aztecs, cosmic cowboys, hysterical shrubbery, chemically-induced sanity, a Moebius space opera, more World Apart, Den, and Polonius, plus a Roger Zelazny short story. ($3.00)

HM #7/ OCTOBER, 1977: Packed with knights, ladies, jet pilots; insanity, reincarnation, and other harmless pastimes; 10 pages of color Moebius; the Airtight Garage, Den and Polonius redux; and fiction by Theodore Sturgeon. ($3.00)

HM #8/NOVEMBER, 1977: With nine color pages by Moebius and Rimbaud, the conclusions of both Polonius and World Apart, ex-pugs, intellectual mollusks, birth and death stars, and a great new Harlan Ellison story—the heaviest Heavy Metal yet! ($2.00)

HM #9/ DECEMBER, 1977: This time, went up to 104 pages to bring you the complete saga of Druillet's anti-hero, Vuzz, a chapter from Close Encounters of the Third Kind, and Fortune's Fool by Chaykin and Wein, in addition to full color contributions from regulars Corben, Macedo, Claveloux, and Moebius.($2.00)

HM #10/JANUARY, 1978: We got Morrow to illustrate Zelazny, we got Lob and Pichard to update Ulysses, we got Meehan to do a Heavy Metal calendar girl, we concluded Conquering Armies, and continued Den. Of course, you knew about the Incas, fog lights, and the time warp.($2.00)

BEAUTIFUL VINYL.BINDERS, white with black lettering and art, with metal separators to hold and protect your magazines. Each holds twelve issues of Heavy Metal. ($5.50)

HEAVY METAL

Dept. HM 278

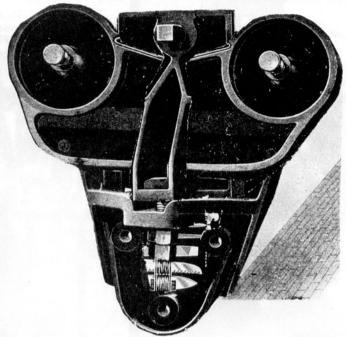

635 Madison Avenue

New York, N.Y. 10022

Please send m	e the following	g:
No. of copies	Issue	Price	I enclose a total of $
	Apr., 1977	$4.00
	May, 1977	$4.00	This amount covers purchase plus shipping and handling. All issues are mailed in protective covering.
	June, 1977	$3.00
	July, 1977	$3.00
	Aug., 1977	$3.00
	Sept., 1977	$3.00
	Oct., 1977	$3.00	7.0
	Nov., 1977	$2.00	Name
	Dec., 1977	$2.00	Address
	Jan., 1978	$2.00
	Binder	$5.50	CityStateZip

If you do not wish to cut the coupon in this ad, but do wish to order, please print or type all the necessary information and enclose it with a check or money order.

by Akbar del Piombo Collages: Rubingtol

The Ode to Progress Expo catalog reveals the spectacular evolution of the robot. This mechanical monster of the first generation is an extinct curiosity, now upstaged by sophisticated biodynamic products so refined that they are in great demand as real fun people. . . .

The catalog, which exhibits all their talents, is a worldwide success. This triumph of western technology penetrates to the most backward regions, winning admirers and enthusiasts everywhere with its promise of a rosy future. . . .

There are types for every taste and purpose. This Don Juan, or "Latin lover," injects a macho touch to artificial insemination, delivers romantic spiel in several languages, boasts hand-tooled parts and no side effects after use.

In the general depollution campaign, hard-core porn is finished. In its place comes a fascination with the enigmatic fascination of Gothic perversity... for this, the "proxies" are ideal, the ultimate in fantasizers....

Below: "Simple Simon" model — a girl's best friend!

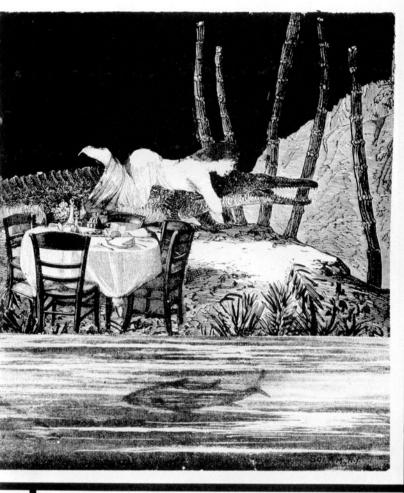

The exciting "Package Deal Orgy" (also called "Sex-Pak") contains Unisex model 1984. Ideal traveler's companion, adaptable for all sizes. Interchangeable parts provide fit partner for any persuasion.

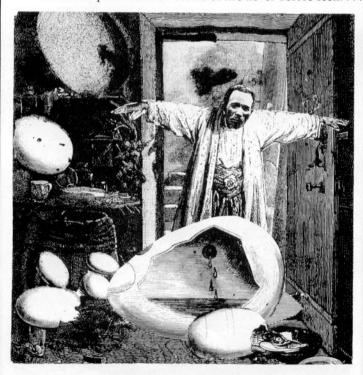

Generation gap is finally bridged. Dirty old men are outnumbered and outclassed by their former prey.

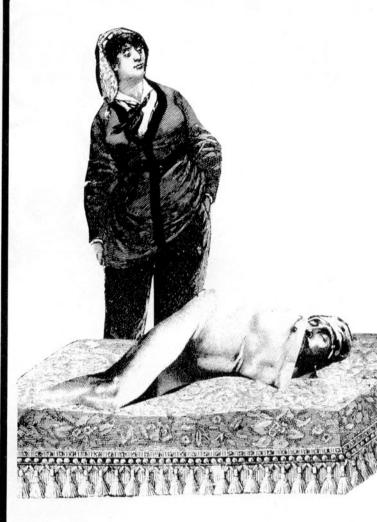

Absolutely every taste was provided for, including those whose preferences went to other species. . . .

The wizards of genetic alteration were busy creating combines that produced new forms of life never before seen. . . .

Freud destroyed. (Or, "so much for penis envy!") Casualties in the war between the sexes now exhibit unprecedented psychiatric damage, as in the case of the client whose sexist dreams enraged the analyst-person.

So much for fun and games

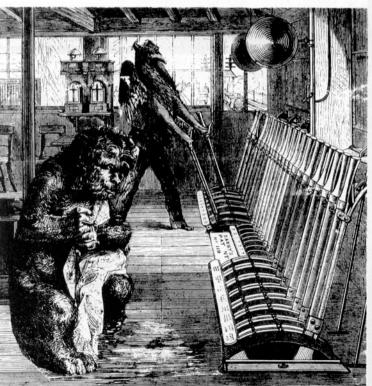

Not only that... the secret to the joy of living was extracted from the frog after long years of intensive study and reduced to a workable formula for the new creations. (Lab photos of Frogus americanus exhibiting undiluted ecstasy approaching orgasm.)

The vogue for the "proxies" was stimulated by old-style sideshows that produced horror shows that beat the movies in realism. Whip and Lash clubs sprang up with acts that "went the limit."

When rumors spread of an automated factory being taken over by demons, few believed it. Most were convinced it was a hoax employing these weird "combo-creatures."...

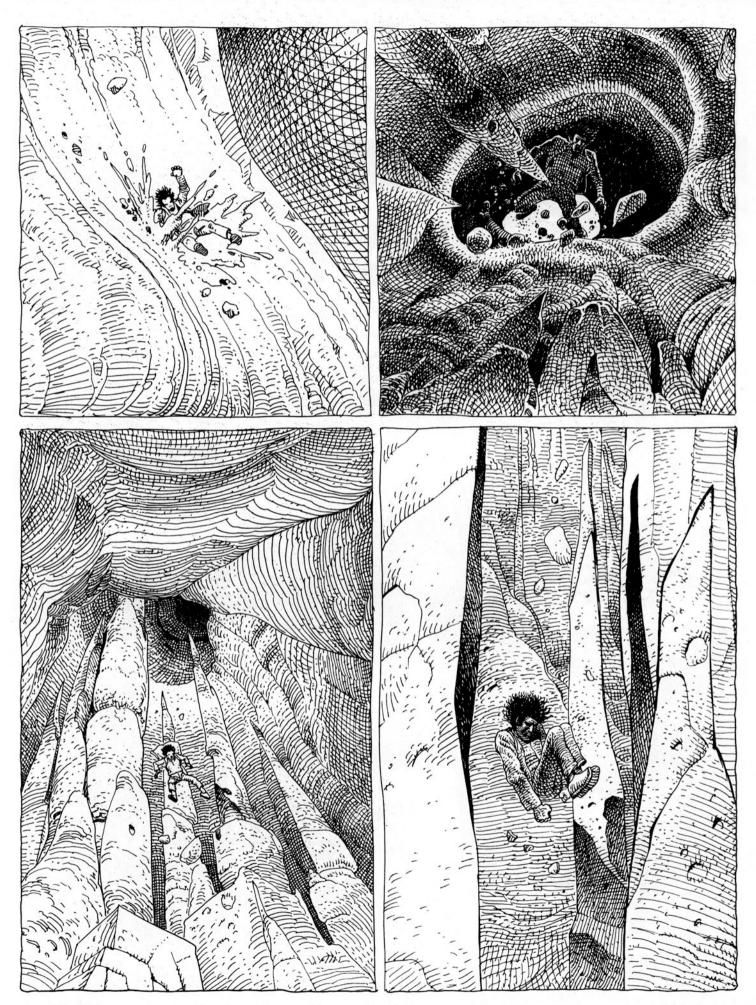

However, some combines failed to work out properly producing peculiar beings that no one wanted. . . .

People were not so sure in the case of an automatic pilot that suffered a breakdown and caused a terrible disaster at sea. Experts were baffled upon discovering its alpha waves had been hexed, pointing to an occult intrusion in the mechanism.

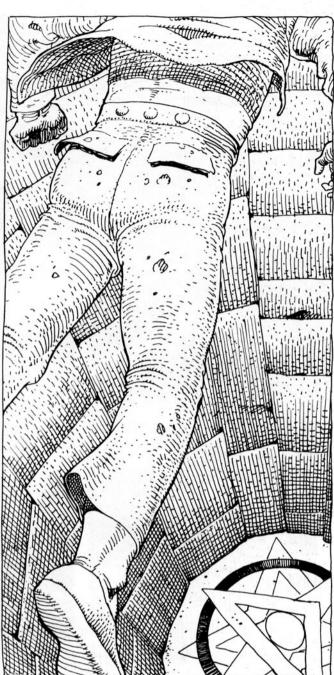

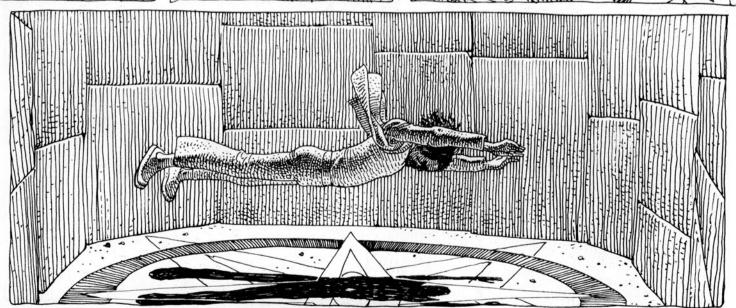

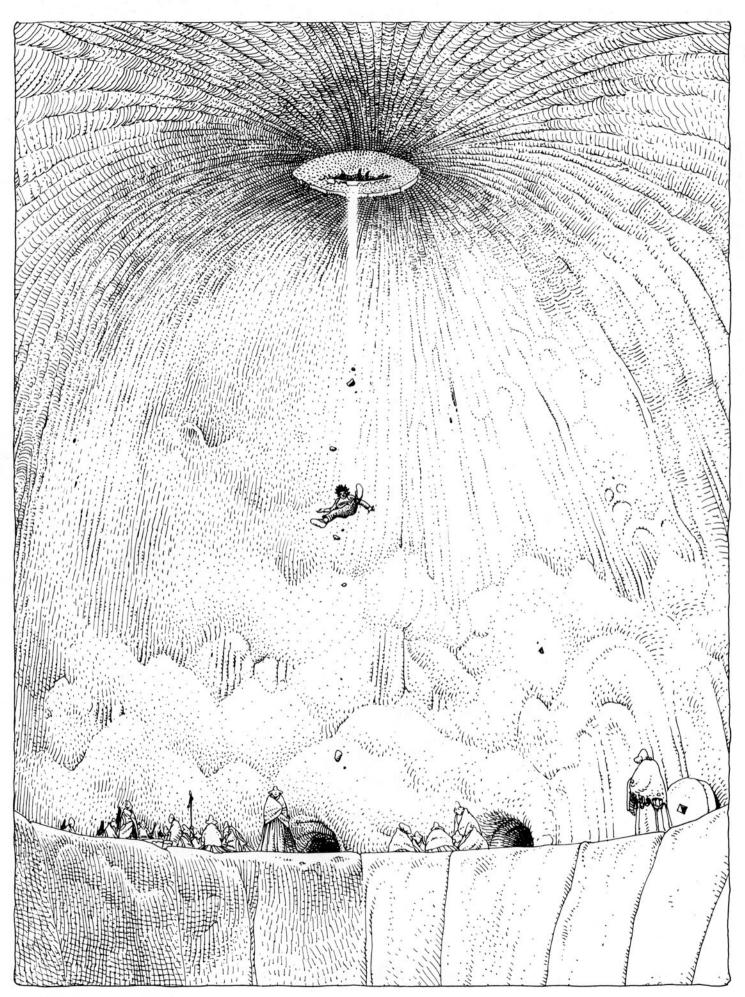

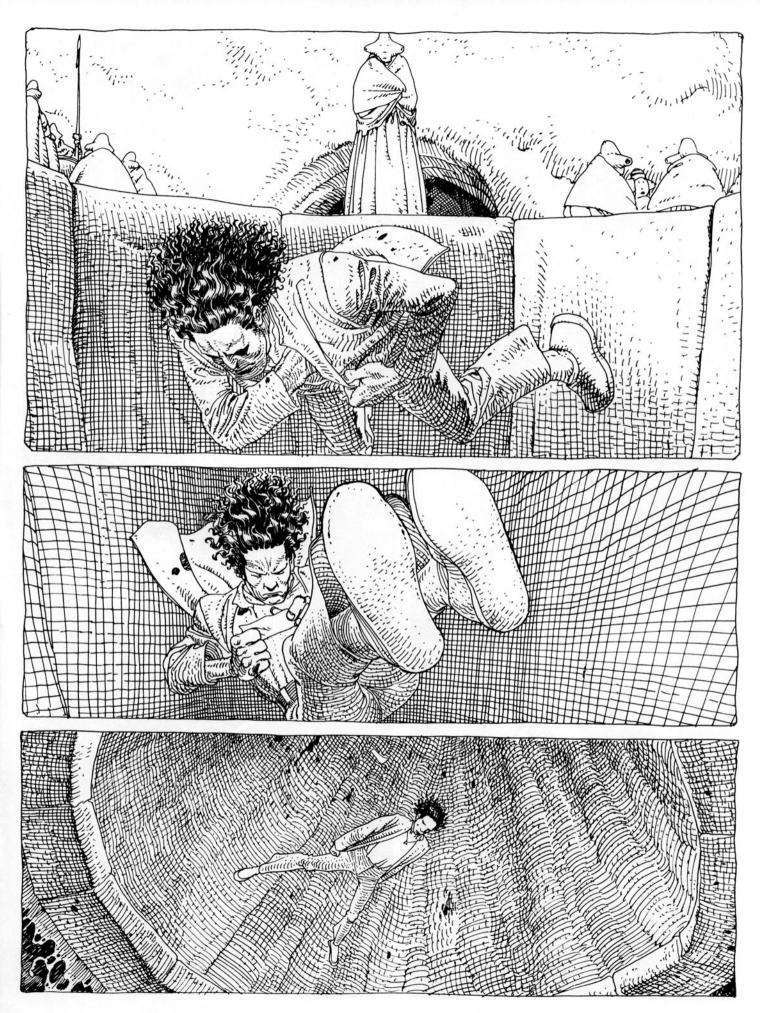

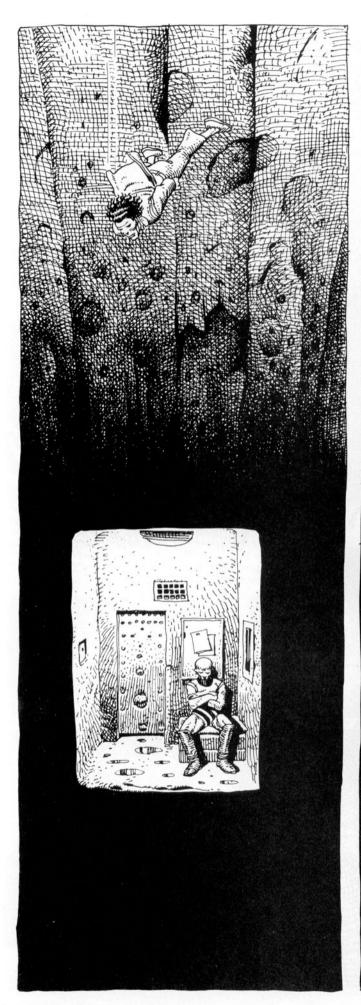

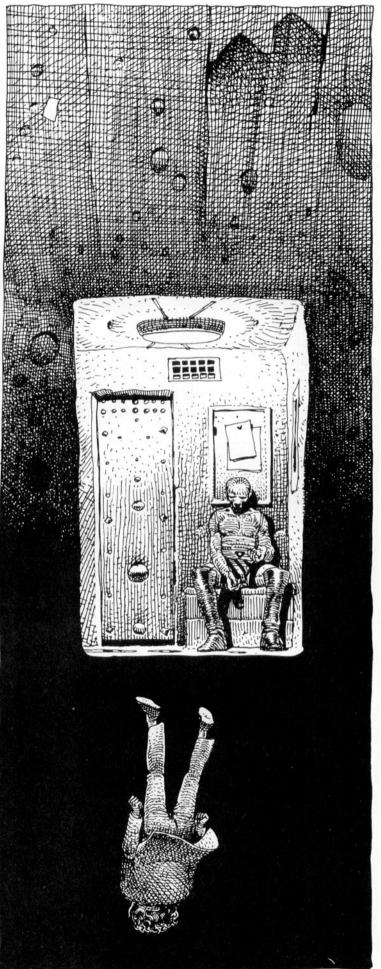

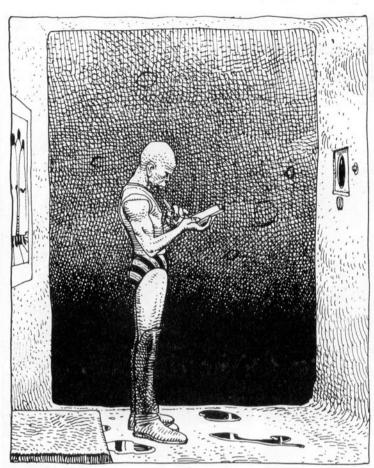

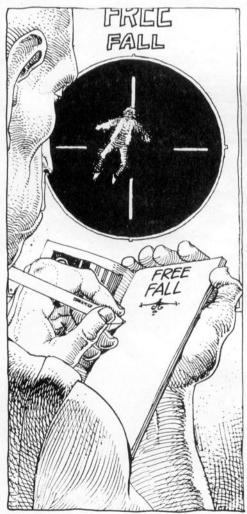

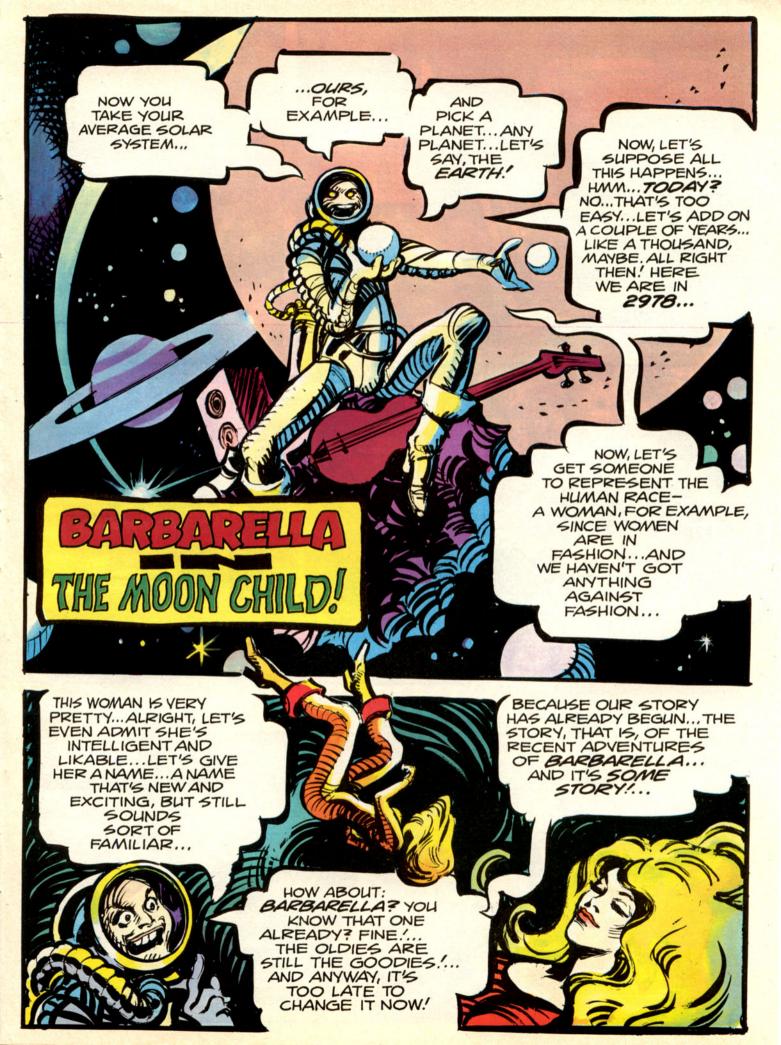

EXACTLY! THE

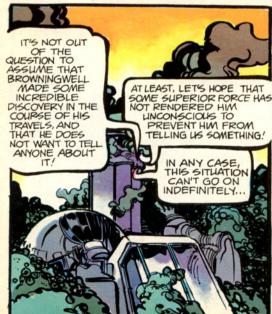

1111

NOTHING! YET HE WAS IN PERFECT HEALTH! PERFECT HEALTH!
THE NEUROPSYCHIATRISTS THINK THIS CATALEPTIC STATE IS AN UNCONSCIOUS
REFUSAL TO MAKE
CONTACT AGAIN WITH
THE REAL WORLD AND
WITH LANGUAGE...

ON YOUR LIPS, THE TASTE OF TASTE OF SALT... WELL, THAT TAKES CARE OF THE SEA! AS FOR THE IDEA OF THE ISLAND.

SO, I'M GOING TO FALL
ASLEEPAND
LAND ON AN ISLAND AND BE ALONE WITH BROWNINGWELL?

AND THIS REPULSIVE

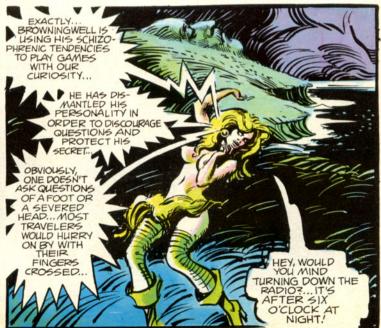

BROWNINGWELL, CAN YOU HEAR ME? BROWNINGWELL, WHERE ARE YOU?

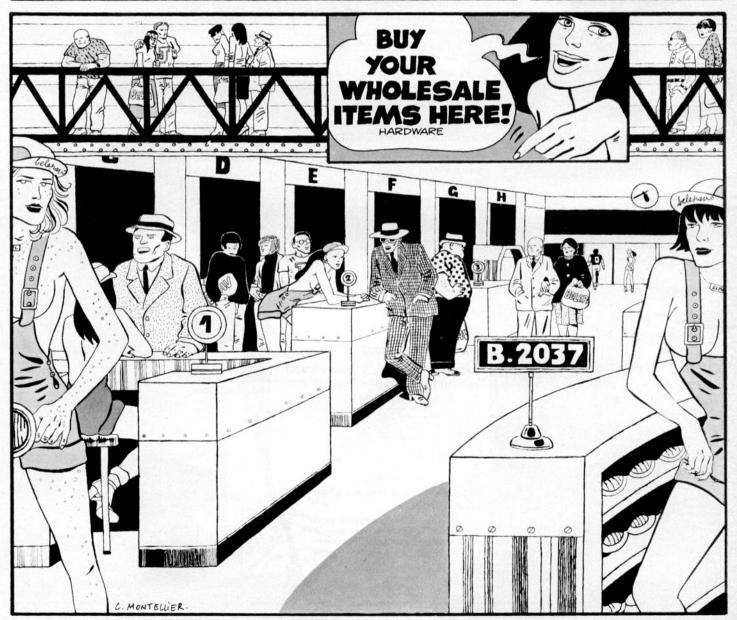

The most incredible T-shirts in this galaxy.

1996

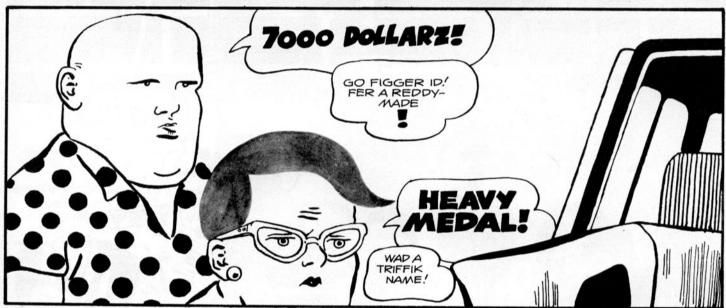

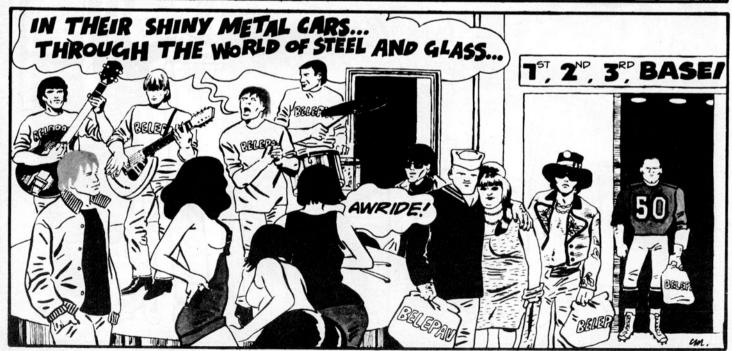

TO BE CONTINUED ...

Satan's Teaps

THE ART OF ALEX NIÑO

Limited edition of 1,000 numbered copies, each personally signed by Alex Niño

- Large (10½ x 13½) clothbound edition with a full color dust jacket -
 - 30 full-color plates —
 - Over 300 pages in length -
 - Over 250 illustrations, most of which are full page plates -
 - Four foldouts measuring 20" x 13" -

"Absolutely stunning volume. Even a long time admirer of Mr. Niño's talent would have to admit this is a showcase nonpareil, utterly breathtaking not only as the compleat statement of the man's vision, but in and of itself as a high-water mark of bookmaking. There is so much to see, so much that dares the eyes to probe deeper, so much that produces gasps of pleasure. The kind of book to which one returns again and again."

Harlan Ellison

