Billy Likes Naked Girls

Why Billy likes naked girls, is not really what this piece is all about. But, if one is to edit a magazine like Heavy Metal, one must confront the facts. Boys like girls with no clothes on. And, for that matter, girls like boys scantily clad, too. But, since our readership is 95% male, the latter, unfortunately, does not often pertain to the situation at hand. Now, how does a woman, a practicing feminist, feed this wanton hunger, without compromising her own beliefs? It's not easy. There's got to be a happy medium somewhere.

The fantasy aspect is what we're pushing here, but if what most of you want is bare limbs, then we'll give you that, too. In this issue, for instance, we have the second episode of Crepax's "The Man from Harlem." After his last series, "Valentina" (which began in the Dec. '80 HM), readers wrote in from all over the globe demanding more of his stuff. "Boy, he sure knows how to draw great asses," is one quote that comes to mind. After a worldwide search, utilizing the cunning wiles of thousands of our staff members (who were all on payroll, we might add), HM happened upon the enclosed strip. We loved it. But "Wait," the staffers wailed, "there's no t & a! You can't have Crepax without lotsa t & a."

Hmmmm. We thought about it. And we thought. And we thought. And we decided it was okay. This strip is so sexy with the forties tone, and the political intrigue and the "great asses," that at worst, you're turned on just a bit. You see, Billy does like naked girls, but he likes this strip, too.

GIRL

IN HER LIFE, ALL THE DISCOVERIES OF HUMAN WONDERS AND THE MYSTERIES OF THE HUMAN HEART WERE MADE AGAIN. IT COULD HAVE BEEN JUST A SLIGHT VARIATION ON NATURE'S PERHAPS TOO-OFTEN-TELD STORY, IF NOT FOR HER REALIZATION OF HER OWN INDIVIDUALITY... AND THE LOGICAL CONCLUSION THAT EACH HUMAN BEING IS UNIQUE, SHARING ONLY THE LONELINESS THAT KEEPS THEM FOREVER APART.

PRAYING FOR IMMORTALITY... AND FEARING IT... SHE STOOD UNDER THE TWIN MOONS OF A MAN-MADE PLANET MILLIONS OF MILES FROM EARTH.

THE SPACE STATIONS WERE NOT YET UP WHEN SHE WAS BORN... BUT A VERY FEW PEOPLE HAD ALREADY SEEN THE FUTURE AND ITS WONDERFUL POSSIBILITIES. SHE WOULD SHARE IN THAT FUTURE BECAUSE OF HER PARENTS. THEY GAVE HER LOVE.

SHE FOUND THE JOYS AND SORROWS THAT OTHERS KNEW. GROWING UP BECAME A SERIES OF HELLOS. SHE HATED THE GOOD-BYES, BUT THEY HAPPENED, TOO.

NO TEARS CAME. NO PRIDE OR SELF-PITY. SHE KNEW THAT WHEN MANKIND MOVED FURTHER INTO THE WARM BLACKNESS, SHE WOULD GO, TOO.

JUST AS THOSE IN HER LIFE LIVED WITHIN HER, SO SHE WOULD EXIST IN SOME FUTURE TIME. SHE WAS HUMAN.

NUVINYL: Fossil Fools

Conventional wisdom has it that rock 'n' roll is a young man's game. Fish-farts, of course, as a look at the age stats of any current stadium/arena-filling woolly mammoth will tell you. While post-adolescent body chemistry might perhaps fuel its ignition, the will to rock now seems less one age group's acne-like cultural outbreak, than the natural rhythm and blues of all generations born since the Second World War.

The Who's Peter Townshend said (in an excellent two-part Musician Magazine interview last summer) that "rock doesn't have an established, dignified way to absorb its heroes into old age"—but that's only part of the story. More precisely, it's a person's attitude toward aging that matters, rather than any simple bit of role-wilderness trailblazing, and whether the artist (or listener, for that matter) presumes maturity brings with it a petrification of tastes. ("Now that I'm an adult, I know what I like!"—and how many baby-boomers do you know most comfortable with music of their high school/college years?) Yeah, old Pete's the guy who once wrote, "Hope I die before I get old," and in a sense his wish came true. As much as I like(d) the Who (and admire Townshend's personal courage and insight), the band hasn't done anything of real interest in more than a decade. Have they simply run out of ideas? (Not unheard of.) Their last half-dozen albums have consistently failed to engage my fickle attention for more than a week, and the few memorable moments seem easily attributable to (itself their first good one in years), it also points up the band's essential dilemma: they're at their best and their worst when new songs actively summon up the ghosts of old ones, which (yeah) is trading on cheap nostalgia, but it's also (yeah!) the only time their juices get flowing. It's a dilemma Townshend's painfully aware of, nostalgic knee-jerks. Bringing me (reluctantly) to The Who's fifteenth and latest, It's Hard (Warner Bros.). Actually, it ain't bad (also thought that about last year's Face Dances while reviewing it, and haven't listened to it since). While the title cut's their best tune since 1978's "Who Are You" and he damn well knows he can't win, either. Maybe the band's announced vacation will help.

The Who: get these guys some wheelchairs!

Lou Reed's got something of the same problem. His solo career has always seemed a shabby TV-movie remake of his Velvet Underground years, full of embarrassing miscasting and unconvincing melodrama (with Lou as the Beaver). Until The Blue Mask (RCA) that is, the Rock 'n' Roll Animal's first post-Velvet rock-filler that doesn't sound like it was recorded at gunpoint. Of course, it wouldn't be a true L.R. album without a selection of twilight zone numbers where Lou's Nixonian seriousness is matched only by the songs' bland imbecility, begging a Memorex-test question about the singer/writer's true intentions. On The Blue Mask, however, forceful emotional conviction (at last!) knives through it all like an ice-cold, Rod Serling voice-over bursting into hysteria. Good show, Lou. What happened?

"Last year's return of Robert Wyatt nearly made 1981 worth living through."

Both Bill Nelson and Peter Gabriel abandoned their respective ascendant star-vehicles (Be-Bop Deluxe and Genesis) just before becoming consumed in the fire. Undoubtedly, it was the best move both of them ever made. Nelson's double-LP The Love That Whirls (Diary of a Thinking Heart) (PVC-Jem)—his first state-side release in more than three years—shows just how much he's grown since his always-stretching-seldom-reaching Be-Bop days. He's honed his vision along with his band (now a self-contained solo, for the most part), and softened the formerly-frequent brittle edges with skin-smooth sensuality and soaring romanticism. That along with a charming new flirtation with melodic orientalisms all add up to a record of warmth, humanity, and sublime surprise—one of my favorites of the year (also recommended: the subsequent Flaming Desire and Other Passions mini-LP).

Peter Gabriel's quartet of post-progressive solo excursions have described a rainbow arc of personal growth. This year's model, called—like all the rest, Peter Gabriel (Gaffen), sinks the crooner/composer/ethnologist cortex-deep in a Jon Hassell-influenced, viscerally proto-rock soup. Like some recent Talking Heads stuff, Gabriel occasionally takes his black-like-me third-worldisms a bit too seriously, but the sure-handed sculpting of sound and breathtaking rhythmic tumbling easily compensate.

Import of the Month

Last year's return of Robert Wyatt to the recording studio nearly made 1981 worth living through. Original drummer with the pioneering Soft Machine and later Matching Mole (hint: look it up in a frog dictionary), Wyatt fell from a window in 1972 and has been confined to a wheelchair since. Other than his post-accident Rock Bottom (which is, as far as I'm concerned, one of the best fukered albums ever recorded), the more elusive Ruth Is Stranger Than Richard (both available on an import Virgin double-pack), and some guest shots on other people's sessions, Wyatt's been pretty much on the sidelines for the better part of a decade. Nothing Can Stop Us (Rough Trade U.K.) collects his past year's singles, and while lacking an LP's unity, it's a great hunk of plastic. Released subsequently is the best single of the bunch, "Shipbuilding"/"Memories of You" (the former an Elvis Costello number, the latter by Eubie Blake). His cracked choirboy voice does it to me every time. (Write: Rough Trade, 326 6th Street, San Francisco, CA 94103.)

RAVEYARD

After live audiences of 60,000 in Shea Stadium or 500,000 in Central Park, what does a rock megastar do for an encore? They track their dinosaur bones into the Valley of Video and syndicate concert performance "fanzine videos" for international consumption.

Remember the flickering laser light effects, pyrotechnics, and Linda McCartney's shall-we-say "scintillating" synthesizer playing on the 1977 "Wings Over America" tour? Rockshow (Thorn-EMI), an energetic, but uneven record of the Paul McCartney and Wings tour, gives you the opportunity to recapture the moment, including a nerve-grabbing acoustic "Yesterday," but at a whopping $79.95. Go for the stereo videodisc if you can (Pioneer Artists, RCA Selecta-vision VideoDisc).

Simon and Garfunkel: The Concert in the Park (CBS Video Enterprises) reunites the superstars in a classic library video, directed with style and taste by Michael Lindsay-Hogg (Let It Be), who manages to create kineticism from Art and Paul's swaying and smiling. All the S&G hits appear, and Garfunkel brings his sugary vocals to some of Simon's solo hits as well. Event music-video at its best.

Deadheads in Radio City Music Hall? Strange surroundings for the concert video Grateful Dead Dead

"Enter the Valley of Video at your own risk."

Ahead (Warner Home Video). But weirder still, is that both the Dead and their audience seem to ignore the plush, incongruous environment, and plow ahead into a musical trance. Predictable and petrified, and please beware the lame appearance of former "Saturday Night Live" buffoons Franken and Davis.

The confrontation between rock and reds breathes through To Russia With Elton (RCA Selecta-vision VideoDisc) a curiously captivating documentary of Elton John's 1979, two-man tour of Russia. Performing with madman percussionist Ray Cooper, Elton's piano virtuosity and tunesmanship shine, but unfortunately the audio is a bit creaky. (It's one of the earliest home videos, and it probably was sabotaged by the blue-suited KGB types who populate the exit doors of the concert hall.) Detente rock.

Enter the Valley of Video at your own risk. Most of the time, it's a place where only fans dare to tread.

POP POOP

At one point, my situation went from bad to worse. I was really down for a few years—went to a mental hospital, was unemployed, laughed at, and for all intent and purposes was washed out in the industry—though I was too stubborn to quit.

"The Stooges' innovative blend of psychedelic drone and metallic power rock never really propelled Iggy to his desired stardom—the group finally disintegrated in an orgy of drug abuse."

So writes Iggy Pop, the howling dynamo who fronted the mythic, nihilistic Stooges (1967-71), and introduced an arsenal of unconventional stage props like peanut butter and broken glass. The Stooges' innovative blend of psychedelic drone and metallic power rock never really propelled Iggy to his desired stardom—the group finally disintegrated in an orgy of drug abuse following 1973's classic Raw Power LP, the first of many touted "come-backs"—but Mr. Pop's un-feet just before the ten-count, Iggy's career history has a fascinating undercurrent of masochistic determination—and now he's weighing in with a coffee-table book of recollections, I Need More (Karz-Cohl), and a new LP, Zombie Birdhouse (Animal/Chrysalis).

The tellingly titled I Need More is less an organized autobiography, than a random sampling of tape-recorded anecdotes that fully captures Iggy's distinctive Midwestern patois. Profusely illustrated, the text traces his love/hate affair with band members, the music industry, and society, but cops out miserably on the motivations behind his legendary behavior. As such, I Need More is woefully incomplete, and its serious lack of name-dropping and kiss-and-tell render it inconsequential to all but the truly cultist.

Pop's latest platter, Zombie Birdhouse, is far more intriguing—an adventurously uneven melange of rock, ballads, avant-tribal rhythmic and cowboy crooning. With a sympathetic new label and producer Chris (Blondie) Stein, Iggy has cracked the gotta-getta-hit mentality that made last year's Tommy (Monkees) Boyce-produced Party such a poopier. Contrast the growling heavy metal parody of "Bulldozer" with the languorous, Enoesque guitar balladry of "Platonic," and you'll discover a performer who refuses to pander to expectations. For better or worse, Iggy Pop is stretching his skills as a songwriter and singer, hoping we'll recognize the sincerity of his "Horse Song" lyric: "I think you noticed that I don't want to be a bad guy anymore."

BRIAN WHO?

Given the fact that over 50 percent of all Rolling Stones fans have no idea who Brian Jones was, one must at least appreciate the retrogressive sentiments behind such a book as Mandy Arfel's *Death of a Rolling Stone: The Brian Jones Story (Delliah). However, the minimal factual content, and the reliance on third-hand hindsight, immensely decreases whatever value such a book might have had. In short, anyone who was a Stones fan during Jones' tenure with the group ('62-'69) is almost certainly aware of most of the data presented here, and as far as any conclusions the author comes to, they don't hold up particularly well—even to the facts as she presents them. In the words of former Stones' manager/producer, impresario Andrew Loog Oldham, what we have here is "just another fairytale."

The book's angle is the author's speciality—the psychotherapy of artists, and the research proceeds from that point of view. Her style of writing isn't exactly conductive to readability, her musical knowledge isn't strong enough to follow through her inquiries, and she is so obviously intimidated by Keith Richards, her only informative interviewee, that only a pinprick of light is shed on the subject's life and (particularly) death. Brian Jones was the founder of The Rolling Stones, who gradually became less and less useful to Mick and Keith, who ejected him, after which he died under mysterious circumstances—that much we knew. But Ms. Afzel, if you're going to get us going with sensational headlines, let's have some expository dirt to back it up!

BONDAGE

Every red-blooded, Anglo-American male who admits he's over twenty-five will remember that icon, that potent symbol of the sixties—James Bond. Bond epitomized what the sixties male was supposed to be—dashing, suave, debonair, fast with a gun, and always, always with a beautiful woman on his arm. James Bond and Sean Connery, character and actor, were indistinguishable during that time. Thanks to a publicity machine that merchandised Bond/Connery to the hilt, Connery's face was everywhere; he was James Bond. Alas, the pressure of Bondage became too

Sean Connery on the reBond.

"Now more a relic than an icon, James Bond became a cartoon show, a 30 million dollar Road Runner in drag."

great, and Connery threw off the mantle in 1971, after Diamonds Are Forever.

Now more a relic than an icon, James Bond became tarnished with age. Portrayed first by George Lazenby, then by saintly Roger Moore, he became watered down by TV overexposure and imitation, and particularly by the fact that reality was becoming as fantastic as any of the films. Bond was becoming a cartoon show, a 30 million dollar Road Runner in drag.

Connery, meanwhile, voiced dissatisfaction about the Moore Bonds in interviews, and then agreed to remake Thunderball for producers Jack Schwartzman and Kevin McClory. On September 20, 1982 filming began on Warner Bros.' Never Say Never Again. (Get it?) At the same time, the last of the United Artists/Cubby Broccoli Bonds is being produced: Octopussy, with Roger Moore as Bond for the sixth time.

So, the summer of '83 will be an ironic one: Connery will be in a new Bond film, competing directly with the series he helped create. And for more irony, the director of Never, Irvin Kershner, will be competing with Revenge of the Jedi—Star Wars III—after he directed the second installment, The Empire Strikes Back. Who will win the audience? Or will two Bonds be double double-oh-seven overkill?

—Tom Sciaccia

FOURFATHERS

Four big books by four of the biggest sf authors in town. Well, almost. Four by their publishers' count, maybe one by mine. Still, Heinlein, Asimov, Clarke and Hubbard have released new books this year.

Battlefield Earth by L. Ron Hubbard (St. Martin's) is billed as a saga of the year 3000, though as Hubbard's introduction makes clear, the book is firmly rooted in science fiction's so-called Golden Age. It is the story, epic in scope, of the dwindling age of mankind—an age in which man has been thrown down and senselessly demeaned by a heartless, conquering super-race, the Psychlos. It is the story of one man, Jonnie Goodboy, whose courage and mettle are proved as he takes on the Psychlos and a hostile universe with nothing to urge him on but the will to win.

What Hubbard has succeeded in doing here is to resurrect thirties and forties pulp fiction: not as we remember it through a golden haze, or in the callings of Asimov's "Golden Age" anthologies, but as it gushed in a torrent of ink from typewriter to printed page. What's most disappointing is Hubbard's apparent innocence of the way the world has changed since the days of his past glories. There's no disputing that he was a professional writer who could aim for a market and write on demand. What I'd like to see is how such a writer translates into the eighties. Hubbard's been retired for a long time now, but surely a man willing to commit a 250,000 word sf novel on the subject, has some new ideas. What's the point of dredging up the past?

As you might expect, Robert Heinlein's Friday (Holt, Rinehart and Winston) is a good deal better. This is Heinlein informed by Donald (Matt Helm) Hamilton, Edgar Hoover, and Mickey Spillane. This is the rough and tough school of sf writing that Heinlein turned (practically) into an artform with The Puppet Masters and the carefully paced intrigue of Double Star. Nobody has done it better since those books, and most unfortunately, neither has Mr. Heinlein.

Friday is the novel's superb, beautiful, super-talented heroine, who in the best Heinlein tradition, is a little larger than life, and a little more vulnerable. All in all, the novel is encouraging—a classic Heinlein mix of thriller, sf, moralizing politics and a carefully explained finale, it is a far stronger book than The Number of the Beast. His next may be the one to look out for.

Judging by Isaac Asimov's Foundation's Edge (Doubleday) there'll be fewer readers, not more, for the still next installment of Hari Seldon's 1000 year plan. The novel begins with a cynical sort of putdown of the old Foundationers we've all grown to love so well. Hardly an auspicious start, particularly coming from the unpleasant face of our equally unpleasant hero, Golan Trevize. Salvor Hardin, Ebling Mis, and Arkady—in this new Foundation age, the romance has gone out of these names. This is revisionist history with a vengeance. How could you do this to us, Dr. Asimov?

The answer, of course, is that the cynicism is Asimov's own. More than once Asimov has been quoted as saying, "I just couldn't turn down the money"—but my intuition tells me that this was a book Asimov profoundly dreaded writing. I don't detect any of Asimov's interest in this story, any of his glee, any feeling for his characters. If the author doesn't care, why should I?

The real surprise of the lot is Arthur C. Clarke's 2010: Odyssey Two (Del Rey). Clarke has outdone himself, and the result is one of the most intelligent and thoughtful sf novels of this or any other year. Obviously, 2010 takes up where Clarke's earlier novel left off, but the book stands on its own as an independent achievement. In his forward, Clarke reviews some of the circumstances leading up to the first book's writing, and I think by doing this, he intends to explain some of the marked differences in tone and mood of the two books. After all, 2001 was virtually written in collaboration with a movie-in-the-making—an experience most novelists would shun, I suspect. Clarke took to it well, and delivered to us a masterpiece that resembled very little of the rest of his work. 2010 is not the product of such a collaboration, but it is a generally philosophical novel bridging the gap between Clarke's earlier works, Childhood's End, A Fall of Moondust, and the inspired aberration, 2001.

THE LIZARD KING AND THE KURT JESTER

I don't have any idea where we are or where we're going. To be on the way to somewhere is all that counts." Quoth I—perhaps unfairly—from Craig Kee Strete's fictitious acid flashback of his days as a fifteen-year-old part-time sap and sidekick to Jim Morrison's drugged-out Memphis topheles—i.e., Burn Down the Night (Warner Books). Who needs to think when your feet just go...? Novelists, for another.

As an author of a handful of very good short stories (buried in two collections of very mediocre fiction), Strete had heretofore dis-photograph by Jill Krementz played an ability for shrewd social commentary, often delving into his Cherokee heritage to place the effluvia of American culture into a comic light. He had an overview. Burn Down the Night doesn't. Morrison is indistinguishable from any other wired, manipulating, bullshit artist who writes bad poetry when stoned—and it's hard to tell if this is Strete's point. There's little to separate this first-person account of violence, rape, orgies, lousy driving, and stupid adolescent suicide, from the dozens of hokey paperback novels and films that flooded the marketplace circa 1969 (even the book's too-great detail is unlikely to've survived its drug-induced circumstances). And Morrison needn't Rimbaud, for Christ's sake! And Strete isn't yet Hunter Thompson or William Burroughs or Richard Farina or even Rudolph Wurlitzer—he hasn't learned to control his novel-length visions. Perhaps he hasn't thought to.

Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. used to have this problem. His 1973 novel, Breakfast of Champions, was an attempt to tie up the loose ends in the lives of his previous work's stock company, as well as many of his favorite themes. Not a bad idea, but Breakfast was terrible—battered, rambling, mawkish, and by my count, funny but thrice. Nineteen seventy-six's Slapstick was far worse, but long after his talent had been given up for dead, Vonnegut returned with 1979's Jailbird—a flawed, but solid and mature work that did away with much of the cuteness that made his 70's novels so intolerable. A step in the right direction.

Whether Deadeye Dick (Delacorte Press) is another, is somewhat problematic. Vonnegut's latest is the memoir of fifty-year-old Rudy Waitz, one-time child criminal, full-time native of the only Ohio city to be cleared out by a neutron bomb. I counted two dozen laughs in this one; its prose is wry and austere. And if it wasn't in part a companion piece to Breakfast, I would be able to give it my full recommendation. ♣

CRYPTICA

Fishy Mission • Humans are now planning to use the very same fish they've polluted halfway to extinction to help determine how badly they've done it, and what with. French biotechnologist Jean-Louis Huvé, barely restraining his gourmand's instinct to gut and marinate the little buggers, has been experimenting with trout implants. Like French nostrils, trout brains possess hypersensitive smell nodes. Fish register chemicals dissolved in water as variations in electrical neuro-frequencies. Huvé hit on the idea of putting a tiny transmitter in electrodes atop fish's brains, and using his personal computer to analyze incoming frequencies. That way he is able to distinguish common pollutants like Malathion, Parathion, and mercury. It's thought his true ambition is to measure the chemical proportion of garlic in the sauce while preparing truite au bleu.

Nip Knack • Japan, that fiendishly clever nation of honorable engineers, may be on the verge of building the world's first bionic computer. Tokyo University's Professor Shimizu has invented a simple biological motor—a propeller, coated with muscle protein, that rotates when other biochemicals stream past. The Japanese government is investing $8 million for Shimizu to develop a "feeling robot" and a bio-computer. The machines will be given parts of the central nervous system to use as brains, storing information in actual nerve endings, instead of microchips. Sake will be kept on hand in case of nervous breakdowns.

Winged Winos • Fruit flies really know their liquor. Experiments by the University of Australia at a Canberra compost heap show just what kind of connoisseurs they are. It turns out some species have a stronger head than others for the alcoholic content of rotting matter. That's how they allocate food amongst themselves, and avoid interspecies competition. For instance, Drosophila melanogaster head straight for composting grapes and pears, which have the highest level of ethanol, whereas D. busckii prefer decaying vegetables, which is just about okay for minors. Should you happen to no-fice any fruit flies zig-zagging drunkenly, leave a mug of black coffee near the rubbish heap.

"COSMIC AVENGER, FLOPPED IN THE ARCADES. IT WAS TOO DIFFICULT TO PLAY. COLECO'S HOME VERSION IS BETTER."

Magnetic Field • Magnetic Medicine—about as plausible as the healing power of crystals, right? Wrong. Years ago a Japanese scientist claimed to cure neck and shoulder pains with a magnetic necklace. Nobody believed him. Reports in the October Journal of Physical Medi- cine and Rehabilitation indicate that the necklace certainly influences the conduction of nerves in the arm, and might well affect such pains. • Also bizarre is a new use of magnets in the fight against cancer. The problem in the past has been to knock out cancerous cells without killing healthy ones as well. A new technique pioneered in London uses micromagnets targeted specifically to attach themselves to tumor cells. A larger magnet then separates the piggybacked cells from the healthy ones.

The Look Before the Leap

• Shakespeare wrote: "Men must endure their going hence as their coming hither/Ripeness is all" (i.e. there's an etiquette to making exits and entrances). If you've got a notion to leap off a bridge in the Bay Area, and you're style conscious, the Golden Gate's your scene. Richard Seiden (in the International Journal of Suicides) reckons that the Golden Gate's esthetic allure acts as a potent symbol of death with dignity, whereas the Bay Bridge to Oakland is unhip and tacky—explaining why five times as many jumpers choose the former over the latter. Even though to get to the Golden Gate most of them have to cross the Bay Bridge, they wouldn't be caught dead jumping off it.

LATELY, THE HOME VIDEO GAMES ARE GIVING ARCADES A RUN FOR THEIR MONEY. THE NEW ATARI 5200 SYSTEM, THE IMAGIC CARTRIDGES, AND COLECOVISION ALL OFFER HIGH QUALITY GRAPHICS, CHALLENGING GAMES, AND FUN. IN THE NEXT FEW ISSUES I'LL TAKE A LOOK AT SOME OF THE HOME SYSTEMS.

I PLAYED THREE GAMES ON THE COLECOVISION SYSTEM. I COULDN'T WAIT TO TRY THE DONKEY KONG CARTRIDGE, SINCE THAT'S MY FAVORITE ARCADE GAME, AND THE T.V. ADS CLAIM THAT IT PLAYS JUST LIKE THE REAL THING. NO WAY, JOSÉ. IT LOOKS NICE, BUT IT DOES NOT PLAY LIKE THE ARCADE GAME. COLECOVISION'S VERSION IS BETTER THAN THE INTELLIVISION OR ATARI DONKEY KONG, BUT IT LACKS THAT CERTAIN SOMETHING. FOR INSTANCE, THE BARRELS FOLLOW PREDICTABLE AND DULL PATTERNS, THEY DON'T TURN INTO FIREBALLS ONCE THEY HIT THE OIL BARREL, THE APE DOESN'T LAUGH, BEAT HIS CHEST OR EVEN GRAB THE GIRL. MAYBE I'M PREJUDICED 'CAUSE I'M SUCH A DONKEY KONG FAN.

COSMIC AVENGER, ONE OF THE MANY SCRAMBLE-TYPE GAMES, FLOPPED IN THE ARCADES. SURE, IT WAS LOUD AND FLASHY, BUT IT WAS TOO DIFFICULT TO PLAY. COLECO'S HOME VERSION IS BETTER. YOU FLY A SPACESHIP THAT DROPS BOMBS AND SHOOTS ROCKETS AT ALIEN CITIES, UFOs AND TANKS. THE GRAPHICS, AS USUAL, ARE COLORFUL. THERE ARE THREE DIFFERENT SCENARIOS, AND FOUR LEVELS OF DIFFICULTY. EVEN THE SOUNDTRACK IS ABOVE AVERAGE.

COLECOVISION'S VENTURE WAS MY FAVORITE. IT'S TWELVE GAMES IN ONE BECAUSE YOU, THE MAN WITH THE ARROW, ENTER ONE OF FOUR ROOMS

ON FOUR DIFFERENT BOARDS AND FACE A NEW CHALLENGE IN EACH ONE. GOBLINS, GENIES, TWO-HEADED MONSTERS, BATS, SERPENTS, SKELETONS, AND DRAGONS ARE JUST A FEW OF THE WEIRDOS YOU SHOOT DOWN. ONCE THEY'RE OUT OF THE WAY, YOU STEAL THE TREASURE AND SPLIT FAST BEFORE A DEMON ENTERS AND SNUFFS YOU. EACH ROOM HAS ITS OWN MUSIC, ALL TOP-TEN MATERIAL, AND IT'S SOME OF MY FAVORITE VIDEO GAME NOISE OF ALL TIME.

OVERALL, COLECOVISION IS SUPERIOR TO BOTH ATARI AND INTELLIVISION, ALTHOUGH I HAVEN'T TRIED ATARI'S 5200 SYSTEM YET. THE CONTROLS ARE EASY TO MANIPULATE, THE GRAPHICS ARE INTERESTING, AND THE SYSTEM WILL EXPAND TO ACCOMMODATE EXPANSION MODULES.

IF I WAS GOING TO SPEND ON A HOME VIDEO GAME SYSTEM, MY BUCK WOULD STOP HERE.

DEN II

When last we read, Tarn, who had become the king of the Lorumang Mts. and the Knorland Forests, returned to take his bride, Muuta. Soon after his arrival, Den discovered the Dramites' evil plans, and he, Muuta and the rest of the Minimuutan people planned their escape.

Damn!

Muuta, time has run out.
We've got to leave.

Muuta is my married her.

Don't worry, I won't eat you. I love you

But Muuta and I have much to do first.
We've got to have a family... maybe a

LAST WE READ, THE YOUNG APE WAS REUNITED WITH THE EMPEROR, WHO WAS MAKING IMPROPER ADVANCES TOWARDS HIS GIRLFRIEND.

ZORA

SO FAR, AFTER SURVIVING A TOO-CLOSE-FOR-COMFORT CRASH-LANDING ON THE HONEYCOMB, ZORA AND HER CRUSAIDING COMRADES ARE AMBUSHED BY ONE OF SHARTA'S PATROLS. AMON IS GRAVELY WOUNDED IN THE FRACAS—WILL ONE OF THE HONEYCOMB'S AUTO-MEDICS BE ABLE TO SAVE HIM?

THERE'S NO DENYING IT. AMON'S BODY SUSTAINED SEVERE CELLULAR DAMAGE DURING HIBERNATION. THESE WOUNDS NOW HAVE ONLY ACCELERATED THE DECLINE.

WE DON'T KNOW HOW TO REVERSE IT, AND NOW ISN'T THE TIME TO START LOOKING AT THIS RATE, HE WON'T LAST MORE THAN A COUPLE OF HOURS.

THERE'S ONLY ONE THING I CAN THINK OF: A TRANSFUSION FROM THE EARTHING, ROB, WHOSE BLOOD CARRIES A SPECIAL IMMUNITY FACTOR. IT COULD WORK AS AN ANTIDOTE. IT'LL BE RISKY, BUT WE DON'T HAVE ANY OTHER CHOICE.

I THINK WE SHOULD TRY THE IMPOSSIBLE. I WON'T BLAME YOU IF IT DOESN'T WORK. I'VE ALREADY DECIDED THAT IF AMON DIES, I'LL GO WITH HIM.

AS THE TECHNICIANS PROGRAMMED THE AUTO-MEDIC FOR THE TRANSFUSION, SOMETHING UNEXPECTED SUDDENLY APPEARED ON THE MENTAL READ-OUT SCREEN.

'GOOD! GOOD!' WHEN WE WERE HIBERNATING IN THAT LABORATORY BASEMENT ON NEW EARTH, AMON WOKE UP BEFORE I DID. THIS MUST BE HIS MEMORY FROM THEN!

IF THE IMPRESSIONS ARE STRONG ENOUGH, WE MIGHT BE ABLE TO HEAR HIS THOUGHTS. TURN UP THE SOUND.

ONCE THE AUTO-MEDIC'S MIND-LINK WITH AMON HAD BEEN AMPLIFIED, IT WAS EASY TO HEAR HIS REMEMBERED THOUGHTS.

I SEEM TO BE THE ONLY ONE AWAKENED. SOMETHING OR SOMEONE MUST HAVE SET OFF THE TIME CONTROL.

I CAN SMELL TROUBLE NEARBY... BUT WHY HAVEN'T THE ALARMS SOUNDED?

WHOEVER IT IS, IS STILL OUTSIDE THE LAB. HOW CAN I SENSE ITS PRESENCE? WHAT THE HELL'S GOING ON? IT'S LIKE SOME KIND OF SUBCONSCIOUS SIGNAL, A MESSAGE BUT I WAS NEVER TELEPATHIC BEFORE.

THEY'VE DETECTED THE LAB AND ARE GETTING READY TO DESTROY IT... I'VE GOT TO STOP THEM WITHOUT DISTURBING ANY PALS. I'VE GOT TO BEAT THEM TO IT. TAKE THEM BY SURPRISE.

A LONG-DEAD NEW EARTH LOOMED UP BEFORE AMON AS HE LEFT THE UNDERGROUND LAB, BUT HE SEEMED NOT TO NOTICE THE DESOLATION ALL AROUND HIM, AS IF HE DIDN'T CARE ABOUT IT AT ALL.

ONE TRAIN OF THOUGHT RAN THROUGH HIS MIND: THE TRAINING IN SEARCH AND DESTROY TECHNIQUES HE'D HAD AS A SOLDIER. HE KNEW AND SAW NOTHING ELSE.

THE BIO-SENSOR HAS SPOTTED THEM!

THEY'RE LESS THAN A MILE AWAY!

AND THERE'S MORE THAN ONE OF THEM... AT LEAST THREE. I'M SURE OF IT.

The Entity

Based on a True Story...that isn't Over Yet

by Carl Macek

Stories of a discarnate being which attacks a woman in Culver City, California, seem strongly rooted to the stuff that dreams are made of. And yet, in 1975, according to the most reliable sources,
these stories proved all too real for a woman dubbed
"Carla Moran"
by author
Frank DeFelitta.

Carla Moran (Barbara Hershey) enters her bedroom, where the entity awaits.

Twentieth Century-Fox's new film which adapts DeFelitta's carefully researched novel, The Entity, peels away the veneer of religious dogma and occult mysticism surrounding these types of attacks, and focuses in on the real life horror of a young woman who was repeatedly victimized by such a demon.

Frank DeFelitta is a reasonable man. In fact, his years of experience as a documentary filmmaker provide him with credentials that mark him as the voice of reason. His interest in the supernatural has only surfaced in the last few years, due to an extremely unusual coincidence that occurred while he was filming a documentary on the "Stately Ghosts of England." A camera set up by DeFelitta using infrared film (allowing images to be recorded in total darkness) on time exposure, captured the image of something completely inexplicable. The footage has been examined by a virtual army of experts, and the general conclusion is that the film is a record of the movement of a lower ectoplasmic form. In other words, DeFelitta photographed a ghost. His accidental discovery became legendary in the field of psychic research. In 1975 a group of psychic investigators stumbled onto one of the most graphic cases of unexplainable physical phenomena ever investigated. DeFelitta was contacted and asked to participate in the experiments. The particulars of this incident were recorded in DeFelitta's novel The Entity. Everything that DeFelitta describes in his book is either substantiated by on-site research, or by intensive interviews and cross reference. The one exception is the final experiment utilizing liquid nitrogen—an experiment which was conceptualized but never realized, due to the lack of appropriate financing.

The case study that DeFelitta participated in was controversial. The psychology department at a major university was also studying the case, and came up with their own conclusions. "Regardless of how you want to interpret the facts," DeFelitta cautions, "the events documented in this around the head and mouth, abused her and then left. If the incident had stopped here, it could have conceivably been written off as the product of a troubled mind trying to cope with the responsibility of supporting a family, and coming to grips with the fears and anxieties that go with this sort of life-style. It didn't stop here.

From this initial encounter with her astral attacker, Carla Moran's life would never be the same. She was repeatedly attacked—in her car, in her sleep, in front of her children—her life had truly become a nightmare. Initially, she sought psychiatric help at a local university out-patient clinic. Al-

Supposing her story could be true? After all, no one has proven that it isn't. Then that's what this picture is all about."

case really happened."

What happened is actually rather routine, if suspension of disbelief is not a hard concept to deal with. In 1975 a young woman, Carla Moran, who lived alone with her three children in the outskirts of Los Angeles, was brutally attacked. The incident took place in her bedroom while her children slept in the next room. What was strange about this particular assault was that the attacker was invisible. Some unseen thing had entered Carla Moran's house, beat her though impressed by the severity and sheer volume of the bruises and bite marks that accompanied Carla's story, the general conclusion by the staff of psychologists was that injuries sustained by Carla were the result of a complex mental illness. To the resident doctors that examined her, Carla was a very sick woman. The manifestation of these bruises and marks were self-inflicted, occurring in a state of mind in which the victim is totally unaware of self or surroundings.

It wasn't until Carla interrupted a conversation between a pair of psychic researchers in a bookstore to explain the phenomenon she was experiencing, that the root of her problem took on another analytical viewpoint. After hearing Carla's story, these members of the parapsychology department at the aforementioned university, attempted to set up a controlled environment in Carla's bedroom, in order to see if they could experience and perhaps record the phenomenon that Carla was living through. She agreed, happy to find someone who did not feel that she was crazy after hearing her story.

An initial try proved to be a dud. It might have been the end of the story had Carla not convinced them to return and try again. This time the experiment was a success. Carla Moran was surrounded by a roomful of professional researchers, students and a skeptical Frank DeFelitta, all outfitted with recording devices of one sort or another. She began to invoke her demon, chiding him for his cowardice and reluctance to show himself in the presence of her "army." Her intense emotional outbursts eventually produced results. The entity appeared. At first the room was bombarded by wave after wave of colored lights. DeFelitta recalls, "It was almost as though fireworks were going off inside her room." Carla Moran invoked this entity to reveal itself. In a blinding flash, a form, which appeared to take on human characteristics, was revealed. This form constantly changed its shape. "At first someone would say 'Look there's a shoulder,' or 'can you see its head?'" According to DeFelitta's published account, "the entire event was completely unnerving."

Right: the entity visits Carla very late one evening in her bedroom.
Left: stalking the entity.

The vivid account of this event as recorded in DeFelitta's book, did not go unnoticed by Harold Schneider, a producer who worked on such films as Five Easy Pieces, Stay Hungry, Goin' South and the award-winning Days of Heaven. He contacted DeFelitta and asked him if a screen adaptation had been written. It had. Given this initial go ahead, Schneider eventually was able to put together a package which included a strong story by DeFelitta, the directorial energy of Sidney J. Furie and the talents of actress Barbara Hershey, to star in the role of Carla Moran. Schneider's approach to selling the package was direct. "Supposing the real Carla Moran story is true?"

Carla's son, Billy (David Labiosa) is viciously attacked by the entity.

Supposing her story could be true? After all, no one has proven that it isn't. Then that's what this picture is all about."

The truth is what DeFelitta was selling in his novel: a truth he tried to recreate in his realistic low-key screenplay. He based most of his writing on intensive interviews with Carla Moran. "I used her ideas extensively, though not her literal background, because I had selected to do a novel which would allow me to use factual material in an entertaining way." There was more room for illusion in the novel, more room for dramatic tension. Filming events, such as the ones that happened to Carla Moran, require a more controlled approach. The incidents, which form the basis of the film, were documented in a large part by the parapsychology department studying the case. What the filmmakers tried to do is reproduce the events truthfully and convincingly: to document Carla's story without reverting to extreme improbability or exploitation. There is no attempt to inject homegrown theological philosophy, as in films such as Wes Craven's Deadly Blessing or John Hough's The Incubus. There is no illusion that this incident is the work of the Devil. The Entity follows a basic premise:

this "possession" could have happened to any woman, it did happen to Carla Moran.

The Entity is far closer in tone to The Three Faces of Eve and Sybil than to the current crop of slash films epitomized by Friday the 13th. The struggle of Carla Moran to defeat, or at least learn to live with her nightmarish existence, is the story of The Entity.

The selection of Sidney J. Furie as director was the first indication that The Entity was not just another thriller. Furie's career as a director is as distinguished as it is varied. His first critical success came in his filmed version of Len Deighton's classic cold war espionage thriller, The Ipcress File. He followed this with The Appaloosa, starring Marlon Brando, The Naked Runner, with Frank Sinatra, and the critically acclaimed Lady Sings the Blues, with Diana Ross. What distinguishes Furie's work is his strong visual sense, combined with his ability to pull remarkable performances from his actors. Frank Sinatra was so impressed with Furie's work on Ipcress File, which won for him the equivalent of the British Oscar for Best Director, that he requested him as director of The Naked Runner. Richard Pryor gave remarkable performances in both Lady Sings the Blues and the underrated thriller, Hit, also directed by Furie.

Carla in the chamber, where she and the parapsychologists attempt to trap the entity using liquid nitrogen.

Furie was able to do the same type of directorial work in his filming of The Entity. Barbara Hershey gives credit to Furie for making her controversial and highly physical role in this film work. "Sidney Furie really unleashed me, and I really felt free. Free to say anything, to try anything." But pulling performances from actors is not the sole talent in Furie's directorial repertoire. His selection of obtuse camera angles and flash editing keep the viewer tense. This visual style paves the way for the excesses of the acting, and in a way allows for a greater suspension of disbelief.

Barbara Hershey found herself completely captivated by the character of Carla Moran. Since the character she played in the movie was based on a real person, and since the real "Carla Moran" was living close by, Barbara Hershey took the opportunity to spend time with her, trying to understand the emotional and physical trauma that she went through in 1975, and continues to go through seven years later. This firsthand research paid off. Barbara Hershey is remarkable as Carla Moran. The total commitment to reality sought for in the film is nowhere better exemplified than in Hershey's performance. Imagine the difficulty of acting out a scene in which someone attacks you. Now imagine having to act the same role alone. Not once, but time after time. "To tell the truth, I was a little afraid of going in," Hershey admits. "It's a very physical role, and I like that, because your intellect doesn't get in the way. But, I was more afraid that it might affect me psychologically, working twelve hours a day, experiencing that kind of emotional strain." It is interesting to note that in Carla Moran's case, the entity is not the only factor exploiting the situation. What is evident through Hershey's performance is the fact that both the psychologists and parapsychologists are using Carla for their own needs. When she no longer has any value or does not fit into their established patterns, she is discarded.

In the final analysis of The Entity, it is apparent that the only person able to provide a workable solution to Carla's problem, is Carla herself. The experiments to contain the entity were a failure. The attitude of the psychological community is that the problem rests deep within Carla's subconscious mind. Seeing that the attacks have continued without interruption (although with less severity) from her initial encounter in 1975 to the present, regardless of where she lived or what her mental and financial state was at any given time, Carla Moran had to come to some understanding of the situation. She had to try and accept it.

Underneath the polish and veneer of his work, DeFelitta is also an educator. An earlier book that he wrote, Audrey Rose, dealt with the subject of reincarnation. It also was based on real incidents and was turned into a film. "I truly believe in the concept of reincarnation. And if I am able to convey this philosophy to the readers of my books, then so much the better. I cannot tell you of the number of letters I have received from people who have read Audrey Rose, telling me of similar experiences. And those people have thanked me for writing the book and making this difficult concept make sense." DeFelitta entered the world of The Entity with an educator's mind. "When I see something that I am later convinced could not have been produced from my world—the world that I know, that I can comprehend and perceive—then I am scared." Out of this initial fright comes the need to understand the phenomenon and explain it. In this way, Frank DeFelitta may educate someone who has similar experiences. His book and the film succeed in making sense of this improbable situation. If it opens the door to the possibility that there is more to the universe than what is easily perceived, then Frank DeFelitta feels that his work is successful.

THE ARK

THE ARK.

THE ARK IS CLOSED...
WAITING.

THE ANTEDILUVIANS, GUIDED BY THE IN-FAMOUS, VOICE OF A MANK, ARE AL-READY THERE.

SLOWLY THE FRIGHT-EVED GIANTS WALK AROUND THE ARK, SEARCHING FOR THE ENTRANCE.

UPRIGHT AND NOFFER-EAT TO THE SPIRIT OF THE ELEMENTS, THE ARK IS CLOSED. (AH!
THE EVE OF THE DILUVION.)

THE RAIN FALLS FOR QUITE A LONG TIME -
MUCH MORE THAN 40
DAYS AND 40 NIGHTS!
THE EARTH IS COVERED WITH WATER.

SOON, THE HUGE WAVES OF THE MIS-TICAL OCEAN AS-SAULT. THEN, THEY SUBMERGE - ALL ATOP THE BUTTRES-SES OF THE ARK.

THE ARK DOESN'T OPEN.

AND ALAS, EVERY LAST ONE OF THEM HAS DROWNED: THE ANIMALS, THE TITANS.

THIS IS BECAUSE IN REALITY, THE ARK IS FASTENED WITH LEAD, AND HAS NO DOOR.
(BUT MORE ON THIS IN A LATER STORY.)

THE WATER STILL RISES, AND THE ARK, IN DUE TIME, SINKS AND DISAPPEARS. IN TRUTH, THE ARK IS NOT STRONG ENOUGH TO HOLD THE INTENSE WEIGHT OF THE WATER.

AND THUS, PRINCE BEGAN THE AGE OF WATER.

AND YES, O PRINCE,
THIS IS HOW THE AGE OF WATER WILL LAST.

HERE THE WATERS REIGN OVER THE WORLD. HERE IS THE ARK—A SHIPWRECKED CATHEDRAL.

IMPLANTED IN THE MOUNTAIN, WHICH SAW IT COME TO LIFE, THE ARK AWAITS
TOTAL DILUVIATION.
WHILE ITS QUARTERS ARE ALREADY IM-MERSED IN THE BLACK NUTRI-TIONS OF UNDER-WATER DECAY.

THOUSANDS OF YEARS PASSED IN THE SILENCE OF THE DENSE, IMMOBILE SEA...

AND THE WRECKED ARK REMAINS HERMETICALLY SEALED.

SUDDENLY, ONE MOMENT, THE WATERS CEASED TO RULE THE EARTH.

AT THE WILL OF THE TIDE, THE OCEANS
RETRACTED IN TIDAL WAVES AND WASTED AWAY, EXPOSING THE SEDIMENT OF THE CENTURIES.

THE ARK REAPPEARED ON THE EARTH'S SURFACE, COVERED WITH SLIMY EXCRE-
MENT AND SILT EN-CLOSED IN ANTICIPA-TION-IMMOBILE.

THE CLOSED ARK:
SHRINE AND PRISON, MOUNTAIN AND TEMPLE, CHEST AND SKULL ARCADE.

AND UNDER THE PETRIED MATRIX:
DEAR PUPPUS
SLOW SCULPTURE, SECRET MATURATION-TRANSLUTATION.

AND STILL EVAPORATION, DESICCATION, DISTILLATION OF THE LAST LIQUID MOLECULES, SAND AND SILT.

(SUCH WAS THE CONDITION OF THE EARTH, O PRINCE—WHICH WOULD LAST 100 MILLION MILLENNIUMS)

LATER-MUCH LATER-NEW FORCEFUL WINDS
ROSE AND COMPLETED
THE CHANGE FROM MUD TO SAND. SAND TO DUST. DUST TO INVISIBLE DEBRIS.

THE CLAY CRUST OF THE ARK IS TORN.
AWAY. LATER AFTER LATER ITS FRAGILE
SKIN OF DRIED SOIL
PEELS OFF. WANDERS AWAY (MILLENNIA OF WIND.)

OF THE PLANET
ITSELF. THE WINDS PULVERIZE THE EARTH CRUST, DIS-PERSE IT TO THE FOUR HORIZONS. SO THE EARTH EXPOSES ITS DEEPEST LAYERS, ITS HEAVY MINERAL HULL.

THE ARK REMAINS.

RESURRECTION. IN THE SPARKLING AIR, IT IS THE ARK! DELIVERED FROM ITS ORIGIN OF CHALK-STONE, THE KARRED HADE REVEALS ITS SILVER CRYSTALLIZATIONS TO INFINITY (BUT STILL OPAQUE. THE TIME OF REVELATION HASN'T COME YET, PRINCE.)

(THUS, THE AGE OF AIR, OF CLEAR AND COLD NIGHT, OF PURIFICATION, OF CONSOLIDATION-A CRYSTALLIZED PSALM.)

(MILLIONS OF YEARS FROZEN IN THE INSTANT OF DAWN.)

(DAWN, MORNING, NOON: THE ERA OF FIRE WOULD LAST ONLY ONE DAY.)

SEE: THE SKY HAS OPENED UP! NOVA!

SEE: THE SUN BURSTS IN TORRENTS OF ARDENT WINGS!

SEE: THE FIRES DEVOUR THE BREATH OF THE WORLD!

SEE: THE AIR PURIFIES ITSELF IN PLASMAS OF IONIZED ATOMS!

AND SEE: WHAT BOILS
UNDER THE SHELL.
THIS TERRIBLE LAVA OF UNLEASHED GODS AND SPIRITS OF THE UNDERWORLD, STANDING UP AND ARE UNITED WITH THE FIRES OF THE HOWLING SKY, IN THE NEAR-DESCENT
APOTHEOSIS OF A COSMIC CONFLATION.

(IN THE HEART OF THE ASTRAL FURNACE, THE UNMOVABLE, DARK-THRONE AND BLOOD-SEES ITS LAST SUPER-STRUCTURES MELT AND AWE AWAY, WHILE ITS SUBSTANCE TURNS RED.

(BUT IT REMAINS, IN ITS ESSENCE, UNALTERABLE AND CLOSED.)

HERE IT IS! THE WORLD IS CHARGED TO THE CORE AND THE SUN IS FADING... HOLOGRAVIST OF AN AETER.
(O POWERS OF THE EARTH! O POWDER OF THE SUN!)
(O SILENCE!)

HERE IT IS! AROUND THE STRIPPED ARK, SPACE - A CAVERN OF LIGHT. THE ARK IS CLOSED (WHO WILL OPEN IT?). ONLY THE ENDLESS UNDULATION OF SPACE
SMOOTHENS ITS FORM.
(YES, PRINCE THIS WAS THE AGE OF EMPTINESS WHICH WILL LAST LONGER THAN ALL THE REST OF ETERNITY.)
(AND WHILE ALL THE THOUSANDS OF YEARS PASSED THE SUNS BLACKED OUT ONE BY ONE, THE GALAXIES COLLAPSED AROUND, ALL THE ELEGANT WERE UNCREATED.)
(THUS, THE LAST FISSURES WERE FINISHED.)

(BUT THE TERM WAS NEAR.)

AND HERE
HERE IS THE LAST STAR OF THE UNIVERSE. ALL DEGENERATED ENERGY HAS FALLEN ON ITS MASS, AND ABSORBING ITS OWN RADIANCE, IT IS INVERTED INTO ONE LAST BLACK HOLE.
EMPTINESS REMAINS.
-AND THE ARK IN ITS FULLY REALIZED FORM, ITS FINAL CRUISE
THE ARK, FOCAL POINT WITHOUT SURFACE, WHERE INFINITY IS INCLUDED.
UNLASTING INSTANT EMBRACING THE ETERNITY OF KNOWLEDGE.

AND HERE AGAIN:
HERE IS ONLY EMPTINESS, IN ITSELF ABOLISHED.
ONLY A GOD REMAINS.
HERE IS ONLY CONSUMMATED TIME, ONLY OBLIVION EXISTS.
HERE IS INFINITY,

...OF THE ARK, TRANSPARENCY...
OF ITS TERMS, IMMUTANCE...

THUS, PRINCE, THE ARK WILL NOT OPEN ONTO THE OUTSIDE—IT IS ABOLISHED AS WELL AS THE INSIDE IT TURNS IN ON ITS ENTIRETY—INVERTS ITSELF, AND IS REVEALED.

SO, SO HERE IS THE ONE THAT WAS INTEGRATED WITH ETERNITY.
HERE IS WHERE OPPOSITES CONVERGE...
HERE, FINALLY RECOMPOSED, THE ULTIMATE PRINCIPAL OF THE LIVING UNIVERSE, ALPHA AND OMEGA...

BEFORE THEN, I HAD NEVER REALLY PAID ANY ATTENTION TO THE GREAT MASSES OF BROKEN DOWN CONCRETE BUILDINGS. TO ME, THEY WERE JUST RIDICULOUS FORTRESSES DATING BACK TO THE GREAT WAR OF THE RELIGIOUS NON. ON THIS DAY THEIR BEAUTY SUDDENLY APPEARED TO ME. I WAS ATTRACTED BY THE IMMENSE POWER THAT EMANATED FROM THE MONOLITHIC BLOCKS.

IT WAS NOT WITHOUT DIFFICULTY THAT I UNHINGED THE LOCK ON THE HEAVY STEEL DOOR, THAT HAD BEEN RUSTED SHUT SO MANY WEEKS AGO. I GOT INSIDE ONE TINY, DAMP ROOM, WHERE THE CRUSHING WEIGHT OF THE PARTITIONS BROKE THE THREAD OF TIME, AND LEFT ME ALL ALONE... ALONE, TO FACE HISTORY.

THE OLD MEN OF THE MOUNTAIN

IN EACH OF THE 60 FORTRESSES OF SABRAM, REIGNED A FORMIDABLE ARMY.

GO GO!

AN EXTENDED WAIT FOLLOWED...

ONE MORNING...

MAN YOUR POSITIONS!

WHAT A MAD HUMAN-MECHANICAL FOREST! THE MOST TERRIFYING OF MILITARY EQUIPMENT WAS SPREAD THROUGHOUT THE HILLS. THE MONSTROUS TRAP WAS SET IN HOPES OF STIFLING ANY UNFORSEEN COUPS. THEY SAT-MARKING TIME, READY TO UNFURL...

ATTACK!!!

HAVING USED THE LAST OF THEIR DEFENSES, THE ARMY SET OUT TO WIN, NO MATTER WHAT THE COST. THE RION LANCE OF THE OPPOSITION HIT THE NUCLEUS OF THEIR DEFENSES, SPITTING FIRE EVERYWHERE. THE SOIL TREMBLED, UNDERNEATH THE FIGHTING SOLDIERS, CAUSING HAZE AND CRACKS THAT STIFLED THE MEN'S ABILITY TO ADVANCE.

THEY POUNCED! HITTING EACH OTHER HEAD ON, ASSAILANTS AND ASSAILED MIXED CONVULSIVELY ON THE CARPET OF DEAD MEN. DEATH WAS WITHIN A KNUCKLE'S REACH FOR EACH AND EVERY ONE OF THEM.

BUT THE GAME CAME TO A HALT. IT WAS THE END OF THE DAY, AND THE MEN HAD CHILDREN AND WIVES TO GO HOME TO. SPORADIC SHOTS RANG OUT, BUT FOR THE MOST PART, DAY WAS DONE. THE FORTRESS REMAINED BRUISED, BUT READY FOR TOMORROW'S ROMP.

NONE OF THE FORTRESSES OF SABBABH EVER FELL. THEY WERE BUILT FOR ONE PURPOSE: TO BED THE WEARY SOLDIERS WHO PREPARE FOR THE NEXT DAY'S BATTLE.

By subscribing to National Lampoon you can help us settle a terrible argument between Mandy and Candy.

Mandy and Candy here have just had one of the most awful arguments you ever heard. Well, Mandy told Candy (they're both marketing experts with MBAs) that she could sell more subscriptions to National Lampoon by wearing lots of eye shadow and posing in wholesome outdoor surroundings than Candy could posing her way. Candy said, "Tell me another one!"

Candy says that modern men respond better to a sales pitch that features an attractive woman, wearing minimal makeup, more coyly posed against a plain dark background. "Double phooey," says Mandy.

So it's up to you, the reader, to settle this argument by subscribing to the marketing technique of your choice. You can also save money, but that's a minor point outlined on the coupon. So, please, subscribe today for the marketing MBA of your choice and help us settle this argument between two girls we're very, very fond of. Maybe then we'll get some peace.

Dear HM:

Thank you for bringing on Mr. Berni Wrightson! For years I have admired his art and style, and over those years have become a devoted Wrightson fan. His moods, eerie settings, and somewhat twisted, bizarre characters are a feast for the eyes. I am looking forward to each installment of "Freak Show" in HM.

Carmen M. Imperato
Levittown, Pa.

Dear Ms. Simmons-Lynch:

It's nice to know that no matter how Reaganomics things get, there are still Reasons To Be Cheerful:

1. Movies are better than ever.
 2. Nash the Slash drops into NYC occasionally.
 3. Mary Wilshire draws for Heavy Metal.
- Nice magazine all around. More of the same, only more so!

Joey Cavalieri
New York, NY

Dear HM:

I like good art. "Starstruck" has good art. It looks a lot like Moebius art. Maybe Kaluta always draws like that, but it still looks like Moebius art. (Looks more like Windsor McKay to me.—ls) Berni Wrightson is not that good, of course. We know that now, having seen "Freak Show" and the National Lampoon's Class Reunion strip. But, he keeps busy. And that's fine. Everyone needs to be kept busy. (Hence this letter, eh?—ls) Please explain: "[Rock Opera] sums up the American sensibility of HM better than anything else in the magazine." (Chain Mail, November). (I think it's a self-explanatory statement of my opinion.—ls) Since I buy HM for its fantasy, I am not the least interested in anything "reflective of contemporary reality." I can get that from Newsweek. Anyway, satire cannot be satirized, which daytime TV is inadvertently. (Ever hear of "Soap" and "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman"?—ls) "Rock Opera" does not make me laugh a lot. And why be saddened or angered by someone not "digging" new wave stuff? Some folks "dig" HM comics but detest pop culture crapola a whole lot. And some very sane people (I'm not going to touch this one.—ls) fail to associate rock noise (it's not music, really) with sf/fantasy. But why be saddened/angered? (Because smug, arrogantly narrow-minded people make me sad and angry.—ls) Why not live and let live? It's really very easy. After all, some sf/fantasy lovers prefer, to rock, the Great Music (whatever it calls itself today), the so-called classics: Stravinsky, Shostakovich, Mozart, Vivaldi, Mahler, Prokofiev, Beethoven. They like its intellect, its honesty. (And also that it doesn't at all "reflect contemporary reality." See Greg Sandone's piece last issue.—ls) To them, pop music is affectation, artifice, mass-produced, cookie-cutter junk for the ear without soul. Noise for the plebeian sensibilities. But they surely do like good sf/fantasy, like is served up in HM.

CHAIN MAIL

Dear Editors:

In response to editorial comments in the September '82 issue, I feel that it is beneath the dignity of HM to insult its subscribers by calling them "meatheads," "clowns," and "buzzbrains," regardless of how inconsiderate the readers may be. Surely the editors must realize that HM readers are deeply concerned by what they perceive to be the decline and fall of a great magazine. If they sometimes express themselves by using bullying rhetoric and aggressive invectives, it's only because they/we are totally frustrated by the prospect of being thrown back into the great void that preceded HM.

Clay Green
Tucson, Ariz.

The editors realize no such thing. I reserve insults for those I think deserve it—people who are ignorant of the realities of Big Time Magazine Publishing and insist on educating those of us who have to deal with it every day. Or those who want this magazine to meet their exact specifications, and will tolerate no deviations. Or those, like the next guy, who don't seem to know what the hell they want.—ls

Dear Ms. Simmons-Lynch:

I have been a faithful subscriber to HM since the first issue. While still a leader in adult fantasy, there's not enough Moebius (Eight out of twelve issues in '82 not good enough for you?—ls), Drueille (Nine out of twelve, ditto?—ls), and stories by new artists in the magazine. Your recent issues have strips that are too long or too short, and generally don't measure up to the quality of the first couple of years of HM. (@ #c&@!—ls)

HM:

Unlike many of your readers who assume in their letters that their ideas are representative of an entire slice of your readership, I will state that my views are given in my own personal interest, not in some holier-than-thou ideology concocted by witless assholes. Firstly, I am very pleased to see the content of HM improving once again. Nineteen eighty was a great year, but in 1981 I noticed a trend toward commercialism. I took it in stride, realizing that you must compete with other, trashier magazines. Even with such content, though, HM stood head-and-shoulders above all other magazines. It still had high quality printing, and (of course) "Rock Opera." I am overwhelmed to see your content returning to what I look for: experimentation and surrealism, as well as good adult humor. Rather than attempt to write a book on the subject of what I look for, I will give some examples. It was fantastic to see Ron Post back! Anthony Scibelli's "The Messerschmitt Attack" (June) was one of the best new comics in ages. Nicole Claveloux always impresses me, as does Enki Bilal.

Would you like to take my order? More of the same, make it a double!

Erk Slaine

Dear Julie:

It's certainly quite difficult to make a comic magazine for adults, especially if it's supposed to appeal to intelligent, mature adults, and not just to people over eighteen with a retarded psychological make-up. You are even expected to help surpass a circulation of a quarter million copies each month, and there simply aren't that many real adults in the whole USA, who are interested in graphic story entertainment. But don't rest on your laurels. Even within the boundaries of the demands of commercial success, there is still room for improvement.

For example, your current Wrightson series looks to me like Berni desperately needed money, so he got together with Bruce Jones to produce something stereotyped enough to meet the expectations of most Wrightson fans. It doesn't look like his heart was in it. This kind of story is no challenge for him any more, no inspiration for his creativity; it's just repertoire stuff.

Fernandez's "Zora" has aesthetically satisfying art with clever combinations of different drawing and painting techniques, but the model-like nudes are copied, undoubtedly, from various skin mags. The main problem is the story. Impossible to read, so I just glance at the art.

To sum things up: try to look around for the best talents available anywhere (yes, you already partly succeed at this). If you educate the taste of your readers in a careful step-by-step program, more and more will be able to tell the difference between trash and quality. Tolerance, as I understand it, does not automatically and cogently lead to the renunciation of valuation altogether. But it forces you to be patient with those who have not yet developed the same level of insight. I trust you to continue on the right way with HM. You'll give your share to help further develop graphic story as a form of art, because you care, I'm sure.

Alrlllght, you FANSIES!
Hands off your cocks and pull up your socks.

I'm sick and tired of hearing you complain that you don't get enough bare-assed broads and blood'n' guts type action in this comic strip!

You want adventure, huh? Wanna see the universe? Well, I'm turning you mother-lovers into real he-men, and this strip into--

SERGEANT ROCK OPERA!

Com--pan-- nee--Huh-- March!

There's an alien on my left--YOUR RIGHT! There's a green bug-eyed thing on my right--YOUR LEFT!

SOUND OFF! LEFT-RIGHT!

SLIMEMOLD! TREE FROG!

LEFT, RIGHT, MIDDLE....

STUMBLE!

The middle cadence step (for tripedals) tripped our company up every time.

Once nestled in the lap of luxury aboard the "Love Craft," Marty and I had been drafted--

--And sent to Barrakis, the infamous boot camp planet of the Imperial Star Guards.

After lights out, we met in the latrine to discuss our situation.

I've got to get out of here, pal--I can't march another step, and the food... gag me with a spoon.

Come on, Marty--the cultured rat-waste isn't so bad....

That's easy for you to say. I was headed to the top. I could have been the interstellar Gabe Kaplan--I had the medallions!

Poor Marty. The days crawled by in an agonizing blur of drilling and Pillage & Plunder practice--punctuated by the roar of Sgt. Webfoot....

Alright, you cesspool FILTH, you miserable maggot EXCREMENT-- your swishing makes me PUKE!

YES SIR, DRILL SERGEANT, SIR!

Let's see 20 more laps around the compost! DOUBLE TIME!

What's the matter, Sgt. Webfoot?

Hello, Sgt. Ringworm.

Well, I just can't stand the feeling that the men hate me. I need to find some kind of gestalt group.

Well, I'm going off on an EST weekend tomorrow. Wanna come?

Boot-camp wasn't always hell.

We got to practice missing targets with our laser guns--

--and falling down in twos whenever a single shot was fired.

Eventually, a rough sort of camaraderie sprung up in the ranks of "Dog Shit Company"--

There was "Bug-face," for example--a big, lovable, brainless lunk from Betegeuse...

"Stench," a reedy mucousoid from the urine swamps of Ursa Minor....

In fact, they were manufactured by a robo-mascot company right here on Barrakis.

"Four-eyes," a long-haired, intellectual type...

...And of course, "The Kid." Every company had a "kid."

By day, we were tormented by the strident commands of our sadistic overseers.

By night, Death-Sats patrolled the mottled desert sky. There could be no escape from this planet for any of us--

--except in a styrofoam waste disposal coffin...
